It's tough to get the right loan.

"You can tell they really know this process... that means I know
I'm getting the best loan for me."

IPI introduces our One Step construction loan. Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house. Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan. It's the only zero-point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

The Cookie Crumbles

Kathleen Watches In Horror As New Owners Move Business To North Carolina

By Dan Rattiner

At this point, neither Kathleen King nor the Weber brothers are talking. There's only speculation.

It's all going to come out in a courtroom, of course. Still, from what we know so far, we can piece this thing together with the expectation of at least some degree of accuracy.

One year ago, Kathleen King entered into an agreement with Kevin and Robert Weber to sell them a two thirds interest in her company, Kathleen's Cookies. Kathleen and her cookies are legendary here in the Hamptons, both for their freshness and their taste and for the story of Kathleen King and how she came to build this business.

Kathleen grew up on a dairy farm on Mecox Road in Southampton and even in grammar school was baking cookies and selling them on the street along with lemonade and iced tea. After high school, she opened a bakery shoppe in Southampton and her cookies were an instant hit in the community. The best of them, in most people's opinion, were the chocolate chip variety, which were both chunky and crunchy and absolutely irresistible. You bought them in packs of ten or alternately in one oversized cookie about three and a half inches in diameter. Everything was freshly made of the finest ingredients.

In a short time Kathleen's Cookies was to the Hamptons what Steve's Ice Cream was to Boston or Starbucks coffee was to Seattle. It was one of the things if you came out here you had to try.

That was twenty years ago when Kathleen started her business. About ten years ago, Kathleen opened a second bakery in Manhattan, on the Upper East Side, making the same delicacies. A few years after opening it, however, she closed it. She could distribute her product to Zabar's and Balducci's and some of the other fancier stores in the smaller specialty stores. All those years it had been there and now they said they couldn't buy Kathleen's Cookies directly, you had to get them through a shipper, a jobber. It didn't seem to make sense. And, personally, it hit about as hard as the year that Coke Cola decided to put out New Coke and abandon their classic formula. I couldn't imagine the reason why Kathleen would stop making cookies for sale in places like the Sagaponack General Store or the Red Horse Market or Schmidt's Market.

To this day, I don't know if that experiment – it lasted only about a month before the policy changed and you could buy the cookies in the small stores again – had anything to do with the sale of the business. But, in retrospect, it sounds like something that Kathleen would never do and that new owners might.

What did happen earlier this year and there's no dispute about however, is that the Weber brothers – these are people from up the island who have a sister living out in the Hamptons that they visit – decided to change the cookie making operation and instead have Kathleen's Cookies made in North Carolina at a big manufacturing plant. Kathleen's apparently would be going national and would be made where wages are cheap and where it would be more economical than to make them in Southampton. In

...her cookies were an instant hit in the community. Everything was freshly made that morning of the finest ingredients.

Manhattan from Southampton just as easily as from a bakery in the city.

It's fair to say many people were surprised, when Kathleen announced she had sold the majority interest in her company this past year, but it was a private matter really and nobody knows if she needed the money or the Webers made her an offer she couldn't refuse. I don't know the exact date of the sale, but it was about a year ago. Shortly thereafter however an astonishing thing happened involving Kathleen's Cookies. You couldn't find it

Jon Kanas of Eastport may be pulling off another coup. The CEO and President of North Fork Bancorp has made a $1.9 billion offer to buy Dime Bancorp. It would be his third acquisition in a month. At the present time Dime shareholders are scheduled to meet on March 15 to approve a merger with Hudson United Bancorp, a New Jersey firm. Now that meeting is up in the air since North Fork is bidding almost 45% more than Dime shareholders would get with the Hudson United bid. Wall Streeters have expressed amazement at this last minute bid for Dime. It's a huge offer. "Nothing like this has ever happened before," seemed to be the universal comment.

First Jerry Seinfeld, now Donald Trump. The Donald has reportedly gone to contract to buy the 215 Bayberry estate in Shinnecock to make it into a mansion with condominiums, tennis and golf.

Actor Billy Baldwin and his mother Carol are launching a fundraiser for breast cancer research that could result in one engaged couple to enjoy a wedding of their dreams. Dial 1-900-WEDDING and your phone will be charged $2.99, ten percent of which will go to cancer research. The remainder gets to be part of a sweepstakes, first prize of which is a $25,000 wonder wedding. Entries are accepted until April 1. The grand prize drawing will take place on April 20. Runner up prizes include three trips for two to a Hollywood weekend in New York and five $1,000 cash prizes. "See Dan's Wedding Supplement issue after page 36."

Director Barry Sonnenfeld of Amagansett will spend much of this summer in Miami working on a movie called Big Trouble based on the work of humor columnist Dave Barry.

Planned Parenthood expects to honor writer John Irving in Washington on March 25, but that is Oscar night eve, and he'll be in Hollywood attending a party at the Beverly Wilshire. He will be in Washington on videotape, however.

Mort Zuckerman of East Hampton, the real estate mogul, and owner of The New York Daily News, has taken a major position into the finance magazine Fast Company.

Michael Forbes of Quogue, who is congressman for the east end, running for his life as a Democrat to keep the seat he won as a Republican has said he will not accept backing from the Suffolk Right To Life Party.

Many Hamptonites attended the salute to comedian Steve Martin held at the Waldorf Astoria to benefit the Queens American Museum of the Moving Image. They included Lorne Michaels, Rick Moranis, Sara Jessica Parker, Al

Southampton, twenty-four people who worked on the assembly line at the bakeshop were fired.

At this point it might be a good idea to review how Kathleen's Cookies, a typical mid-size corporation, is run. Things had gone amicably at the sale. Kathleen would own one third of it and she had been designated as the president and CEO, a title given to someone who is in charge of making the day-to-day decisions.

A President and CEO is also supposed to make the policy decisions but in a mid size corporation such as this one, the two brothers could overrule her.

Indeed, I find it hard to imagine that Kathleen would want to move the cookie bakery from the Hamptons to North Carolina. Though Kathleen's could now be a national brand a hundred times the size it is now and the Webers could make a fortune, Kathleen too, there was the matter of freshness and quality. I recall Famous Amos, who for a number of years made cookies that rivaled Kathleen's in freshness. There was Famous Amos' picture on the box. Then Famous Amos Cookies distributed nationwide and they weren't the same and shortly thereafter the picture of Famous Amos vanished from the packaging entirely. Could history be repeating itself?

At this point, with the manufacture of the cookies moving to North Carolina, Kathleen had to realize that the one thing she loved was slipping away. For twenty years, people would stop her on the street and tell her how much they enjoyed her wonderful, freshly baked cookies. Now these cookies in Southampton would have to be shipped in from North Carolina.

Is this an accurate assessment of what happened? Well, consider what it was that blew the principles of this corporation apart two weeks ago. Kathleen, on her own and without the approval of the Weber brothers purchased new cookie making equipment to be installed back at the Southampton bakery. The Webber brothers retaliated by firing Kathleen from her job as president and CEO and Kathleen retaliated according to the Webbers, by doing a lot of screaming and threatening as she gathered up her personal possessions. Kevin Weber's wife, Dorey, applied to Southampton Town Court for an order of protection against Kathleen. He said that she had shoved her out of the way, she had brought things in and out of the front door and that she had a crazy look in her eye and she was frightened of what she might do next.

She reportedly said to Mrs. Weber - Kevin and Dorey Weber are staying with Kevin's sister in North Sea - that she better watch out she was going to lose her house, whatever that meant. Mrs. Weber was afraid to go out in public for fear of what she might do to her. In response, the judge approved an order of protection, requiring that Kathleen King stay off the Weber property in North Sea.

He however, would not approve an order prohibiting her from going on the Kathleen's Cookies property on North Sea Road, noting that she was still a one third owner in that corporation.

This is in my opinion a very sad day for Kathleen and for the Hamptons in general. Baking cookies is Kathleen King's whole life. She's been the toast of the town and during the brief time when her cookies were unavailable locally, a subject for lamentation in café's and on the beaches in the area. At this point, unless the Webers decide to make a special case for the Hamptons, allowing them to be baked locally early every morning and distributed in the old fashioned way, the days of Kathleen's Cookies the way Kathleen King used to make them are numbered. One can expect the new version to be good, certainly better than any other chocolate chip cookie on the market, but not what once was.

The lawyers will handle it from here, there may be paragraphs and clauses in Kathleen's contract that will allow her to regain control, there may be a new and delicious product produced by Kathleen King, but my guess is that this won't happen. The Webers it seems to me are probably very smart cookies. We'll see.

Featherbed Blowout

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also known as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Joel To Seinfeld

A $40 Million Real Estate Sale Reconfirms Small Town's Turn To Tinseltown

By Dan Rattiner

One of the Hamptons' most beloved figures is leaving the area this spring. Billy Joel, the rock star who was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame last year, has sold his house in Amagansett. The buyer is Jerry Seinfeld. The cost for the twelve-acre compound is forty million dollars – the most ever paid for a home in the Hamptons.

Billy Joel was born in Levittown and after years of living in Nassau County moved to Amagansett in 1982. Amagansett then was quiet and peaceful and more of a bucolic rural place than it is today. There were baymen haulseining for cod-fish in the surf, there were farmers and there were commercial fishermen off shore. It reminded Joel of working men and their crafts that once were prevalent over all Long Island.

In fact, in many ways, Billy Joel considered his songwriting, for which he had an immense talent, to be just another craft, like blacksmithing or clamming or running a small general store.

At one point he had sold more platinum records than any other song writer in history and an interviewer on noting that fact, asked if he thought he was a brilliant songwriter. Joel replied that he didn't think so, that he was a good craftsman and that was all. There were many, many writers of songs better than he.

You really had to go a Billy Joel concert to understand what Billy Joel was trying to find here early in the 1980s. Billy gave occasional concerts at the Nassau Coliseum. He was worshipped there.

As for Billy Joel, he's buying a house back in Glen Cove, Nassau County. The battle to keep his dream of the working man alive here on Long Island is pretty much over.

On the highway leading to the concert, three miles from the entrance, you'd find people hawking T-shirts and album covers with his picture on the front. The closer you got, the more of them there were. By the time you got to your seat, there were about 12,000 fans in the sold out arena, worked into a frenzy for the appearance of this singular individual.

I don't think that I've personally come known a more natural unassuming person than Joel. He needed a quiet life to act as a counterpoint to his rock star public image. He wanted a true private life, to be able to walk down the street and if noticed, said hello to, rather than fawned over. In the 1980s the town was happy to give him and his wife Christie Brinkley this respite. The celebrity madness that was to overtake the town with the arrival of literally hundreds of famous actors, actresses, screenwriters, comedians and TV stars, was yet to come.

Billy built a replica of a commercial fishing boat and named it the Alexa, after his daughter. He berthed it in Sag Harbor. His daughter attended the Waterfront School there. I first met him when my son and his daughter were in the same recital given by a music teacher in that town. I was proud that our small town could treat someone of such accomplishment as Billy Joel with such respect for privacy.

In the late 1980s, Billy Joel made one of his rare political appearances, getting himself arrested on Indian Wells beach, along with several baymen, for illegally haulseining a striper out of the Atlantic ocean. The baymen and fishermen were having a harder and harder time making a living with all the rules and regulations and what Billy did helped them.

When the 1990's came, it was a whole other matter, not only for Billy but this editor and for the whole town. There was Steven Spielberg and Kate Capshaw and Alec Baldwin and Kim Basinger and Spaulding Grey and Barry Sonnenfeld and Marisa Tomei and Donna Karan. This is not to say anything bad about any of these people, they are all fine people, accomplished in their field, it's just that the number of them per square mile added a dimension to this community that changed its character forever.

As for Jerry Seinfeld, and some of the other more recent arrivals, what they don't know won't hurt them. That is to say the Hamptons must seem to them to have always been the way it is today, with charity fund-raisers and high roller meetings at the Candy Kitchen in Bridgehampton and the movie premieres at the East Hampton Cinema with the crowds lined up out front.

As for city dweller Jerry Seinfeld, he was out here two years ago house hunting with his ex-girlfriend, Shoshana Lowenstein. Last year he was out again, house hunting, losing out on an ocean-front home being sold by Fred Seegal (it was bought by director Helmut Lang for $15 million dollars) and later losing again with a prospective deal falling through with financier Herbert Ross and Princess Lee Radzwill.

Seinfeld, took home more than a $150 million dollars from his wildly successful TV show. A friend introduced Seinfeld to Joel and Joel took him through his wonderful oceanfront house, apparently with no interest in selling at the time, but just to show it. They found they had a further interest in common; Seinfeld grew up in Massapequa about eight miles from Joel.

The sale at $40 million was arranged privately between the two principles, so there will be no multi-million dollar commission for any middleman or real estate agent. Seinfeld is beginning a new life with his new bride, Jessica Sklar, and at forty million dollars, which is about double the price of any other home sold in the Hamptons and also about a quarter Seinfeld's net worth, so be it. There are re-runs to be sold and a new life to live and to judge by past performance, the property is a good investment and the value of it will only improve.

An interesting bit of information about the house is that a restrictive clause had been placed on it by the man who owned it prior to Joel. This man, a prominent member of the social set, had built the house a hundred feet wide but only about thirty feet deep. From the side it looked skinny, but from the road it looked like an English estate house, something that was far bigger than it actually was and which his neighbors would have to go some to beat.

When Joel came to buy the property in the 1980's, he was startled to find that in the man's will — the property was being sold by his estate — there was a clause that said the house could not be sold to entertainers or Jews. Joel, who is both an entertainer and Jewish on his father's side, got around this by forming a corporation to serve as buyer. I don't know if that restriction is still in effect, I supposed it would depend on how it was written. Seinfeld, it must be clear to everybody, is not only an entertainer but very Jewish. The original owner is probably twirling in his grave.

Other newspapers have duly reported on the neighbors to this twelve-acre estate. On one side is financier, Bruce Wasserstein, uncle of playwright Wendy Wasserstein, and on the other side the Tyson family.

As for Billy Joel, he's buying a house back in Glen Cove, Nassau County. The battle to keep his dream of the working man alive here on Long Island is pretty much over. Technology has won and the working man has lost. But still, Joel will be out here from time to time. About six years ago, he founded a boat building business in Coecles Harbor on Shelter Island capable of building a forty-five foot runabout of his own design. Duplicates of it would be available for a half a million dollars or so. No boat building had been going on at Coecles Harbor for generations. Before that, it was one of the big industries there. Now, because of Billy Joel, they are doing it again. Joel has sold eleven of his original design and recently announced an even larger boat to those who would like it.

Billy Joel will be missed in these parts particularly at Estia's in Amagansett and John Pappas Cafe in East Hampton where the working men still gather to talk about their upcoming day. I'll miss him too.

Economics Lesson

What's Good Is Bad Except When It's Good And That's Bad, Very Bad. But You Knew That

By Dan Rattiner

Figures came out for the first quarter and show that the US economy charged ahead 6.1 percent for the quarter.

That's good.

That's bad. Alan Greenspan says that the speed of this frightens him.

That's bad.

No, that's good. It shows that Greenspan in working late minding the store.

Who's Alan Greenspan?

He's the guy keeping an eye on the American economy adjusting the interest rates up or down.

Well, that's good.

No, that's bad. Many people argue that the markets should be allowed to go where they wish, that Alan Greenspan is tinkering too much.

Well, that's bad.

No, that's good because Greenspan also discovered that there's almost no inflation.

Well, that's good.

No, that's bad because Greenspan thinks we have to raise interest rates to slow down the out of control growth.

Well, that's good.

No, that's bad. It could throw the economy into recession.

Well, that would be bad.

No, it would be good, because it would take the country through what many think is a long overdue correction.

How does this affect the DOW, somebody asked me to ask about that, and what is the DOW?

The DOW is the average prices of the twenty-five most prestigious and successful securities on the New York Stock Exchange.

Well, that's good.

No, that's bad, because the DOW is supposed to be a good measure of the US economy, and it isn't. Most of its stocks are in big industries that are in decline.

That's bad.

No, it's good, because it reduces pollution in

That's bad.

No, that's good. These stocks are overpriced.

That's bad.

No, that's good because it means people have great confidence in them.

Well, that's good.

No it's bad. If the stock prices drop these companies won't continue to grow. Confidence in them will dry up.

Well, that's bad.

No, it's good. But Alan Greenspan thinks that these companies will grow anyway.

Well, that's good.

I'm not so sure. Right now, people are taking their money out of the NASDAQ and putting it back into the DOW to counter to the trend, and to head off Greenspan raising interest rates.

Well, that's bad.

No, it's good. Critics of Greenspan, say that he should have expected this. He'll learn from this experience.

That's good.

Well, there's the bell, see you next week.

Is next week the discussion of how Amazon.com keeps growing but never makes any money?

No, that's the week after. Next week we discuss on how to wrap up all your money so it stays safe under your mattress for the long term. •

JUNIOR KROLLTM

BY BETTY PARASKEVAS AND MICHAEL PARASKEVAS

Junior Kroll listens to the beat.
There's magic in the rhythm of the busy street.
The sound of traffic moving much too fast,
The cries of the peddlers and the horns that blast,
Blending all together with a reggae tune.
So this was Nassau, where it's always June.
Where culinary experts love to prove their skill,
Serving grouper and conch; When they'd eaten their fill,
Junior asked his folks to make another stop
So he could buy a hat in the straw hat shop.
They rented a car and decided to explore.
West Bay Street wound around the shore.
The beaches were the finest they'd ever seen
With water the color of aquamarine.
Dad checked the map and they headed out to
A popular spot-- the Ardastra Gardens and Zoo.
Junior Kroll had ants in his pants,
Waiting as his folks viewed the tropical plants.
Then on to the zoo and right from the start,
The performing flamingos stole Junior's heart.
He wanted to know why they couldn't buy
A pair of flamingos-- at least they could try.
He begged and pleaded-- they'd be so much fun.
The Krolls assured him it couldn't done
But little Junior never accepted defeat.
He made another stop on West Bay Street.
Back home, Mom and Dad greeted the dawn,
With two flamingos gracing the lawn.
Of course they were plastic, Mom and Dad sighed,
As Junior looked on bursting with pride.

A Visit To A Havana Baseball Game Winds Up With A Visit To A Police Station

By Dan Rattiner

One of the things I like to do when I travel to an unusual place is do what the locals do. For example when I was in Mazatlan, Mexico, I went to a professional baseball game. It was a hotly contested affair and mid-way through the seventh inning one of the umpires clearly made a bad call. The fans expressed their displeasure by throwing some debris on the field and while that was being cleaned up, piling a whole lot more in the stands and setting that on fire. Big bonfires raged for about ten minutes holding up play, until the bomberos arrived to put them out.

Cuba does not have professional baseball but its amateur teams are among the best in the world.

So that is where we Americans went that Sunday afternoon. There was the game. At five there would be an anti-American demonstration downtown for Elian. With luck we would go to both.

Things went well at the game until the seventh inning just like in Mazatlan. But then, though there were no bonfires, there was an abrupt trip to a nearby police station and for a while it looked like we would spend some time in the lockup.

Watching the game were Jack Brown of East Hampton, a recent graduate of the University of California at Santa Cruz and Martha Reikert of Montauk and myself. Also attending was Andres Perez, our interpreter, who it turned out was a big baseball fan.

For three dollars, a taxi (1957 Chevrolet) took

Here we are outside the stadium being helped aboard a military transport truck for the ride to the police station us out to the stadium. The game was between the Havana Metros and a team called Granma. The stadium was located in a rough part of town, kind of a residential industrial area – there was a soft drink factory adjacent – and because of the anticipated demonstration later in the day, the game was not particularly well attended. The stands which were concrete (good for bonfires, I noted), had a capacity of about 15,000. There were 3,000 fans scattered about.

We sat along the third base line, right behind the home team dugout, and the hawkers were selling peanuts, cheese on a hamburger bun, tiny pizzas and little cups of strong coffee that they would give you in a piece of paper folded up like a paper hat there were a lot of empty seats around.

We were probably the only Americans in the stadium and we attracted the attention of some twelve or thirteen year olds, whose job it seemed was to annoy adults during the game. One or two would come over and kind of stare at my camera. They would ask me in Spanish if I would give them some money so that they could get something for me. One of them sold me a very good baseball for three dollars that was covered with the autographs of all the Havana players. Whether it was authentic or not, I don't know. Neither did Andres.

The players on these two particular teams were quite good. The pitchers were throwing over ninety miles an hour. (They had a speed gun, Andres told me.) And both teams seemed to be short on power but long on hit and run. There were lots of bunts, stolen bases and line singles. There were also a lot of errors. In the middle of the sixth inning Havana had made two errors, Granma six. They were mostly judgement errors, such as, two fielders unable to decide who ought to catch the ball.

"I've never seen so many errors," Andres said.

"Can pitchers throw 100 miles an hour?" I asked Andres.

"Oh yes," he said. "It happened the day before yesterday. When someone pitches that fast, they announce it over the loudspeaker."

Havana scored first and went out in front. Granma rallied and then Havana pulled away. By the seventh inning it was Havana 6, Granma 3. The teenagers had been around again, three of them, and we had shooed them away.

Now Jack looked down and said grimly, "My bag is gone."

We stood up at our seats and looked around and indeed it was – and the teenagers were gone too. There was nothing we could do.

"What was in it?" I asked.

Witness to the theft. Note military transport in background

"Not a damn thing of any value." Jack said. "A paper backbook, The Grapes of Wrath, that was it. Oh, and my house keys and oh God, this hurts, the diary I've been keeping for four months."

"They'll throw it away." I said. Jack and Andres got up and started looking around, talking to people in Spanish. Andres went over to talk to a couple of the policemen. I sat for awhile with Martha. I don't speak Spanish, and I couldn't see how I could help, but the whole thing kind of put a bad taste in my mouth. Eventually I too got up I started looking in trashcans and I started talking sternly in English to some of the teenagers who had reappeared. They all looked concerned but didn't seem to follow my line of questioning.

After awhile we all came back to where Martha was holding on to our seats and the rest of our possessions.

"The police said they'll keep an eye out," Andres said. "But we shouldn't get our hopes up. This kind of thing happens."

"Do you want to go home?" I asked Jack.

He hesitated. "No, let's watch the game," he said.

And so we did for another half inning, but clearly, none of us were enjoying it anymore.

"Let's head out," I said. "We've seen enough." And we got up and walked to the exit.

Out on the sidewalk in front of the main entrance, a small group of people were involved in some kind of drama. There were three police officers, a young boy of about twelve, two women, one of whom was crying and two men. We stopped about fifteen away and then Andres went over; he soon came back.

"It's about the bag," he said. "This boy saw another boy take it and he knows him, but not by name. The woman crying is his mother. The police want to take the boy down to the police station to look at pictures. The mother said it's the worst thing that's ever happened to her in

Michael Caine and Christopher Reeve star in a now-you-see-it-now-you-don't cat and mouse game that's as playful as a devastatingly sharp battle-axe. It was directed by Sidney Lumet.

April 1st ~ Rocket Gibraltar

An ailing father entertains his large family in his Sagaponack house for his 77th birthday celebration. Wonderfully heart-warming barely describes this film and Burt Lancaster's sensitive performance.

April 8th ~ Annie Hall

The epitome of Woody Allen at his very best. It won four Oscars, including Best Picture. Hilarious and thoughtfully melancholy at times... no one can resist this movie~ or should.

April 15th ~ David And Lisa

The gentle exploration of a mentally disturbed young couple, groping for places in the world~ remains one of the best films on the subject. Performances by the lead couple are marvelous.

April 22nd ~ Last Summer

Exceptionally strong story of the trials of teenagers playing out explosive games of sexual awakening and status on local beaches. Provocative and jarring, its original X rating has been edited for an R.

April 29th ~ Masquerade

A taunting romantic suspense thriller of an ambiguous young man's ambitions and the wealthy wife he might have married for her dowry. Beautiful people and likewise beautiful, close-by locations, highlight the dark plot.

May 6th ~ The Fan

Lauren Bacall stars as a Broadway star stalked by a psychotic admirer. Also featured is James Garner. Be cautioned! This is a tough, exploitive shocker... not for the faint of heart.

May 13th ~ The Dain Curse

Fittingly adapted from an early Dashielle Hammett novel, this well produced, film version is crammed full with the smoking-gun intrigue of The Maltese Falcon author.

May 20th ~ Grey Gardens

This somewhat shocking documentary actually remains compellingly poetic and touching. It captures a small portion of the later years of Edith Bouvier Beale and her daughter, Edie (aunt and cousin of Jacqueline Onassis), filmed in their decaying, over grown mansion in East Hampton. Once seen, Edith and Edie, will not soon leave you.

New DOE Security Badges Worry Some Scientists At Brookhaven Lab

By Jerry Cimisi

In the wake of an improper transfer of classified information at Los Alamos National Laboratory, the Department of Energy has called for more strict security measures at its laboratories. This includes Brookhaven Lab. Foreign nationals who work at the lab have been issued red identification badges that show, in addition to the bearer's name, the individual's country of origin.

"Some of the lab's employees have expressed concern over these badges," said Mona Rowe, Brookhaven National Laboratory's director of Media Communications.

Prior to this, all BNL employees had green badges – which were not necessarily worn but carried on the person of a lab employee. Now the DOE has directed that by the end of 2000 American scientists and workers will wear grey, foreign nationals red, and those who have security clearance will wear either a yellow badge for "L clearance," or a blue badge for "Q clearance," which is the highest security clearance.

Recently the Department of Energy charged that top secret information related to the manufacture of nuclear weapons had been illegally transferred from "secure" computers at Los Alamos National Laboratory to computers that could be accessed by many individuals. A scientist there, Wen Hoo Lee, was charged with the improper transfer. In March, 1999, Lee was let go by Los Alamos, though not charged with a crime. Later in the year, however, he was charged for a series of illegal computer transfers, going back to 1983 and ending in 1995. There was speculation that Lee, of Chinese extraction, had passed on sensitive information to agents of China. Lee has vehemently denied this. In fact, in 1987, Lee's wife Sylvia, who worked as a secretary at Los Alamos, became a covert informant for the FBI, giving the Bureau information on Chinese delegations that visited Los Alamos.

Lee's recent arrest and forthcoming trial has stirred up passionate debate not merely about the nature of security at national labs but the issue of discrimination. Many have said that Lee is being singled out because of his Chinese background. At Brookhaven National Laboratory, an Asian-American scientist told Mona Rowe he felt he was stopped one evening by security outside a BNL facility because of his nationality.

"It was dark and from the guard's perspective I'm not sure the guard could even see his face," said Ms. Rowe, who is herself Hawaiian-Chinese. "Anyway, when the scientist showed his identification, there was no problem."

Actually the DOE regulations about foreign nationals having to wear different badges than the rest of the lab's employees was instituted in 1994 but never enforced. The recent situation at Los Alamos has changed all that.

Russel Reaver, Director of Security for BNL, related that the 1994 DOE directive mandated there should be a standard badge for all DOE employees and that foreign researchers working at America's national labs should have their country of origin designated on the badge. "They don't have to wear them but have the badges in their possession," said Reaver.

"In November, 1998," he added, "the DOE said the standard badge would no longer be green and that workers at national labs would have a three color badge system: grey for American workers, red for foreign nationals." Lab employees with security clearance would have either yellow or blue – and those could include foreign nationals.

Reaver said that out of about 3,000 people working on the lab at any given time there are currently about 320 with security clearance. "Under one was expected to carry identification – and said, in addition, that if the DOE may require employees to wear badges, Brookhaven Lab has not itself issued a directive to do so now. Specific departments within the lab have, however, ordered their employees to wear them at work in their respective facilities but not necessarily on the lab's campus.

"By definition," the employee said, "we're in business to do unclassified work. We encourage people to come to the lab no matter where they are from. We want to give information away. If I were working at Los Alamos it would be a different story – although there, too, foreign scientists are encouraged to work at both classified and unclassified work."

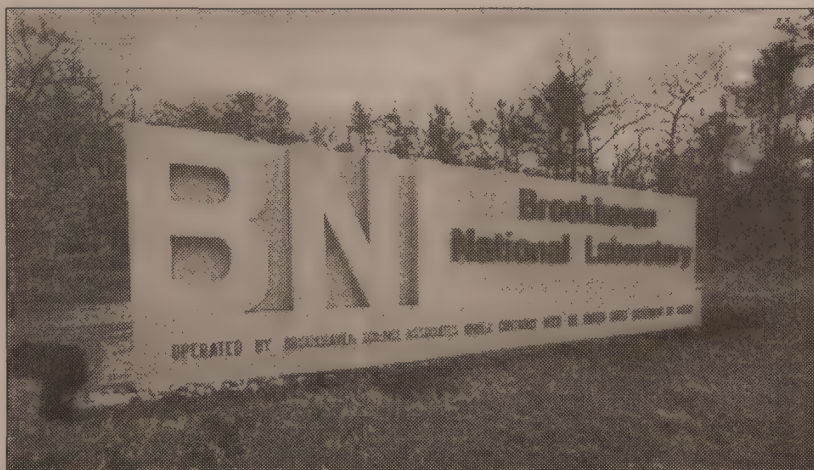

There is more than one interesting twist to the case of Wen Ho Lee. It was in 1995 that Secretary of Energy Hazel O'Leary informed the White House and the CIA about a possible theft of information from Los Alamos. The head of the CIA at the time was John Deutch. Deutch has since left the agency – and is now being investigated for the charge that he improperly removed files from an agency computer and put them on his computer at home. But, unlike Lee, Deutch has not been arrested for a criminal act. Lee and his supporters can only point to this as further evidence that Lee is being unfairly singled out because of his ethnic background.

When asked about the case of Lee and Deutch, the BNL employee said, "I would hope that the Justice Department pursues Deutch as they would Lee. If you're entrusted with material that could compromise national security you have a certain responsibility and should be penalized if you violate the law."

The DOE and Justice Department are considering that not only did classified information get improperly transferred at Los Alamos, but that the Chinese somehow got hold of this information and in the 1980s made a quantum jump in their nuclear warheads program.

Thus, not only is security at national labs more stringent, but the government has just instituted the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA). An arm of the DOE, NNSA will be responsible for security at labs, as well as the maintenance of security at nuclear weapons stockpiles.

At any rate, it should be realized that science in America has advanced at the meteoric rate it has in good part because of "foreign" scientists, many of whom became citizens. Albert Einstein is a case in point. So is Werner von Braun, the German genius who was behind much of the success of the American space program. Before that he was employed by no less a malevolent regime than the Nazis. The DOE's mandate for the wearing of special badges for foreign scientists may have its merits, but it is hoped this does not foster an atmosphere in which the scientific work of researchers from other countries is hampered or even discouraged.

ten percent of our budget is for classified work," he said.

The DOE directed that foreign researchers and workers had to have the red badges by April, 1999, with full transition to the new colors completed by the end of 2000.

Whether American or foreign, some scientists are not comfortable about the new badges.

"Generally scientists see themselves as having an allegiance to a scientific community above national barriers," said Ms. Rowe.

As one of the premier research laboratories in the world, scientists from many countries come to work at the lab. There are currently about 300 foreign nationals working at the lab now, said Ms. Rowe, and throughout the year about 4,000 scientists from other countries work at BNL.

She added that many scientists have no problem about researchers being required to wear different badges if their work takes them into classified facilities, which is only about six percent of the work done at the lab. "We have only two buildings where classified work is done," she said.

A BNL employee, who preferred not to have his name attached to the following comments, "because it's a hot issue right now," said, "My personal feeling about badging is that it is a sensible thing to do on a site that has a lot of classified material, but in relation to BNL it's overkill."

He added that the lab had never required employees to wear badges in the past, although Nowadays, it's risky enough to start your own business, considering the economic uncertainties that have become a fact of life. Add to this unpredictability the fact that the business you are buying is a legendary enterprise whose former owner is one of the most beloved and respected men on the East End.

Undaunted by the prospect of following in such famed footsteps, friends Maryann Calendrille and Kathryn Szoka took the plunge and bought Sag Harbors distinguished Canio's Books last October when Canio retired, devoting himself solely to publishing instead. While neither woman had owned a business before, much less a bookstore, and neither had known each other well for very long, they were more than ready for the challenges confronting them.

Ms. Calendrille, a former president of the local chapter of The National Organization of Women (NOW), is used to challenges and defying conventions. Fresh out of college with a B.A. in English, her first foray into the professional world was editing technical manuscripts for the government. "I felt like a fish out of water," she proclaims, "not only because of what I was doing but because I was one of the few women among mostly men in the department."

Moving to New York City for a copy editing job with Hearst Publications brought more challenges. "Living in Hell's Kitchen in the 1980s was no picnic," Ms. Calendrille explains. "It was a rough neighborhood, to put it mildly. I was also working on my MFA in writing at Vermont College. It was a different kind of program, like an apprenticeship where I worked with some really great poets."

As an English instructor at Southampton College for 13 years, Ms. Calendrille's unconventional spirit continued when she initiated a women's student group in 1990. When the program where Ms. Calendrille taught was eliminated, it was this same group that went on a hunger strike to protest the decision.

It was at this point that Ms. Calendrille found herself at a professional and personal crossroad. What to do? Enter Ms. Szoka, a local photographer who holds a B.A. in math from the University of Maryland and a graduate degree in statistics from George Washington University. Not one to run away from challenges either, Ms. Szoka (who was a member of the first national female basketball team at the University of Maryland) joined forces with Ms. Calendrille, taking over Canio's Books.

While each has a unique background in diverse fields, both Ms. Calendrille and Ms. Szoka know that by combining their expertise and interests, they can continue what Canio started. As Ms. Calendrille says, "We've known Canio for a long time. We understand certain paths he may have taken." Ms. Szoka quickly adds, "We do everything together, most of our responsibilities aren't segmented, although Maryann does most of the book ordering, and I keep the records (my math comes in handy here)."

Ms. Calendrille agrees: "Although we have separate tasks and interests, like nature, the environment and photography for Kathryn and literature for me, we have common tastes as well — for the quirky, the unusual. We're free from not having to stock the twenty best sellers."

Even with these well-defined intentions, challenges continually present themselves to Canio's co-owners. For Ms. Calendrille, it's keeping up with trade publications and competition from the Internet. "You know," she says with determination, "It's not really cheaper when you buy from the Internet. We make it easy. People can call us up and order a book. What's good is that we learn from the customers. That's something Canio told us. 'Learn from the customers.'"

Ms. Szoka chimes in: "And we can help the customer, too. If we read a book we know someone will like, we'll let him or her know."

It's obvious that the personal touch will continue to be a big part of shopping at Canio's Books. So, too, will the various poetry/prose readings that have become an East End institution. The new owners say they will be adding fiction and non-fiction reading groups, poetry workshops/circles, musical performances and art shows as well.

Despite the ownership change, stopping in at Canio's Books still feels the same — like entering someone's living room.

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO
"Protecting The Kids In Trees"
March 8, 1985

For us folks with personal computers, the marvel is not the computer particularly, but the "software" disks that you stick into the computer's slots to make them go. In a way, I suppose this is something comparable to working with a record player. The record player, like the computer, is just an appliance. But the record you put on, or the software you put into the computer, that's the dazzling part.

What is all this little tiny business they manage to put magnetically onto a five and a quarter inch floppy disk? Somewhere, somehow, there is a computer programmer, probably a kid about nineteen, who has secreted himself away in a tree house in Oregon. Twenty hours a day he works way out there in the woods, and after six months, he has written this dazzling set of instructions that are so complicated and so carefully worked out that when they are converted to the tiny magnets on the disk, users can spend years just finding out what they are. Frequently the instruction manuals written by the companies that sell the software and employ these programmers are incomplete. Even the companies have not fully figured out everything that the kid in the tree actually did.

The trouble is that, for the most part, it is a very simple matter and takes about twenty seconds to copy the material from one disk to another disk. It is very tempting therefore, when you own a computer, to simply find a friend who has a copy of a particular software and just copy it. Of course, you can go out and spend anywhere from $19 to $700 for the giftwrapped, fully warranted original stuff sold by the software companies.

Needless to say, the software companies are upset about this copying business because if they don't sell enough original stuff they can't stay in business and they can't employ the kid in the tree anymore and there will be no more software written and the computer industry will wither and die and so forth and so forth.

On the other hand, there has been software written in the past that is designed to specifically "protect" other software from being copied. Passwords are required. You put in one disk which unlocks a second disk. It's all pretty cumbersome. People have been known to use it. But they don't like it because you have to go through this long procedure every time you flip your machine on.

And then, last fall, a company called Vault Corporation in Westlake Village, California announced a new set of software instructions which they called The Worm. This was an amazing thing, even for the computer world.

"The Worm doesn't take up much space," a spokesman for the company told the press. "It just stays on a floppy disk, off in a corner, not interfering with whatever other material is on that disk. However, if that disk is illegally copied, the Worm goes into action. We just dare anybody to use an illegally copied disk. What happens is, because they've copied the disk, they've copied the Worm along with it. And in copying, they activate it. The Worm waits a day, a week, whatever, and, after a specified amount of time, worms its way into the illegally copied material and scrambles it. Or it can worm its way into the material and

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of a New Islander #96 The Darwin Awards (Next week, the Shelter Island Darwin Awards)

Once in awhile I get email about the latest Darwin Awards. These awards are given to people who have proven they are too stupid to be allowed to reproduce and further pollute the gene pool. I just had to share these.

(San Jose Mercury News): "An unidentified man, using a shotgun butt like a club to break a former girlfriend's windshield, accidentally shot himself to death when the gun discharged, blowing a hole in his gut."

(Kalamazoo Gazette) "James Burns, thirty-four, was killed in March as he was trying to repair what police described as a "farm-type truck." Burns got a friend to drive the truck on a highway while Burns hung underneath so that he could ascertain the source of a troubling noise. Burns' clothes caught on something, and the other man found Burns "wrapped in the drive shaft."

(Hickory Daily Record, NC) "Ken Charles Barker, forty-seven, accidentally shot himself, when, awakening to the sound of a ringing telephone beside his bed, he reached for the phone but grabbed instead a Smith & Wesson .38 Special, which discharged when he drew it to his ear."

(Bloomberg News Service) "A terrible diet and room and no ventilation are being blamed for the death of a man who was killed by flatulence. His diet had consisted primarily of beans and cabbage. It appears that the man died in his sleep from breathing the poisonous cloud that was hanging over his bed.

"The man was shut up in his near airtight bedroom. He was a big man with a huge capacity for creating this deadly gas," said the coroner. Three of the rescuers got sick and one was hospitalized."

(The News of the Weird) "Michael Anderson Goldwin made News of the Weird posthumously. He had spent several years awaiting South Carolina's electric chair on a murder conviction before having his sentence reduced to life in prison. Whilst sitting on a metal toilet in his cell and attempting to fix his small TV set, he bit into a wire and was electrocuted."

(The Indianapolis Star, Dunkirk, IA). "A cigarette lighter may have triggered a fatal explosion. A Jay County man using a cigarette lighter to check the barrel of a muzzleloader was killed Monday night when the weapon discharged in his face. He was using the lighter to look into the barrel when the gunpowder ignited."

(Associated Press, Kincaid, W. VA) "A man at a party popped a blasting cap into his mouth and bit down, triggering an explosion that blew off his lips, teeth and tongue, state police said Wednesday.

Jerry Stromyer, twenty-four, of Kincaid, bit the blasting cap as a prank during a party late Tuesday night, said Cpl. M.D. Payne. "Another man had it in an aquarium, hooked to a battery, and was trying to explode it," Payne said. "It wouldn't go off" and this guy said, "I'll show you how to set it off."

(UPI, Portland, OR) "Tony Roberts, twenty-five, lost his right eye during an initiation into a men's rafting club, Mountain Men Anonymous, in Grants Pass, OR. A friend tried to shoot a beer can off his head, but the arrow entered Roberts' right eye. Doctors said had the arrow gone one millimeter to the left, Roberts would have died instantly. Dr. Johnny Delashaw at the University Hospital said the arrow went through eight to ten inches of brain, with the tip protruding at the rear of his skull, yet somehow managed to miss all major blood vessels. Roberts admitted afterwards that he and his friends had been drinking that afternoon."

(The Calgary Sun, Vancouver) - "A man arguing over a love triangle accidentally shot himself in the groin, taking off his testicles and part of his penis. Police said the man was waving a .357 Magnum revolver around during the shouting match early yesterday. But when he stuffed it back in his pants the gun went off. Police were called to the hospital after the man, in his twenties, was brought in by friends. Charges are pending against the victim, who is expected to survive."

(Arkansas Democrat Gazette) "Thurston Poole, thirty-three, of Des Arc and Billy Ray Wallis, thirty-eight, of Little Rock were seriously injured when their pick-up truck left the road and struck a tree near Cotton Patch on State Highway 38 early Monday morning.

The accident occurred as the two men were returning home after a frog gigging trip. On an overcast Sunday night, Poole's pick-up truck headlights malfunctioned. The two men concluded that the headlight fuse on the older model truck had burned out. As a replacement fuse was not available, Wallis noticed that the .22 caliber bullet from his pistol fit perfectly into the fuse box next to the steering wheel column. Upon inserting the bullet, the headlights again began to operate properly and the two men proceeded. After traveling approximately twenty miles, the bullet apparently overheated, discharged and struck Poole in the right testicle. The vehicle swerved sharply to the right as it was exiting a bridge, striking a tree.

"Thank God we weren't on that bridge when Thurston shot his balls off or we might both be dead," stated Wallis. Upon being notified of the wreck, Lavinia, Poole's wife asked how many frogs the boys had caught and did anyone get them from the truck..."

her life and her boy is bringing shame to her family. The police want us to come too."

In a few minutes a military troop carrier, its diesel engine rattling, came down the street to where we were. Three more police officers got out from the back. Then all those involved in this ongoing drama were told to climb into the back of the troop carrier to sit on the wooden benches under the canvas. Pretty soon we were all bumping along, accompanied by diesel smoke, maybe a dozen of us sitting back there, with the woman still bawling away and her twelve-year old boy next to her staring miserably at his shoes.

Eight blocks away, we all piled out at a police station, a two story concrete affair with a flight of steps going up to a front porch and then inside a big waiting hall with an elevated area in the back, where there sat a police captain and two lieutenants.

The captain looked like Burt Reynolds. He was on the telephone. The waiting area was swarming with people, police officers going in and out, a young man in handcuffs with an officer by his side, two women in nurses uniforms, and a man with a bloody shoulder. There were three overhead fluorescent lights lighting the room, giving the room an eerie glow. Concrete benches lined the walls. We came in and sat down.

"It seems a bit much," I said to Andres. "It's only a canvas bag."

"A crime has been committed," Andres said. "They have to do this."

"I hope they fry the little bastard," Jack said angrily, referring not to the thirteen-year-old who'd been brought in, but whoever had stolen his stuff. He was, I realized, absolutely right in his attitude and now I could think of three different reasons why this should be pursued to the end, not the least of which was that this kid would hopefully never hang around with this crowd again.

The benches were hard and as time passed I stood up and stretched and wandered about. At one point I got near the Captain and he motioned me to come over.

"Let me see your passport," he said in a kind of heavy English. Your passport is supposed to be with you at all times, I realized, but mine was back at the hotel.

"No, that's alright," I said, sort of making hand motions.

His phone rang and he picked it up. I wandered off, sideways. I walked over to Andres.

"He asked to see my passport," I said.

"Put your camera away," Andres said.

Pretty soon, the arresting police officers walked the twelve-year-old boy and his parents over to the raised desk, and again explaining in Spanish what was going on, I figured it was safe to kind of wander over and join in.

"The police captain is having a hard time understanding what we meant by personal diary," Andres said.

I realized I could help. I had mine with me, about forty hand written pages, I took it out of a pocket and handed it over to the captain, who realized I might never get my diary back.

"Who has a piece of paper and a pen?" Andres said, turning around. "He wants Jack to sign his full name."

I had a brainstorm. "Tell him to use a blank page out of my diary," I shouted. "And here's a pen." I took one out of my breast pocket.

Jack wrote his name, ripped out the piece of paper and handed it out to the captain. The hand came off my diary to receive the paper. Now the phone rang again. And as he went to answer it, I reached my hand in and slid my diary back out and into my pocket.

Now Martha announced that she was going out to buy a bunch of Coca-Cola's.

"I can leave, can't I?" she asked Andres.

"Sure," he said.

I decided this would be a good time to see if I could leave too.

"I'll go with you," I said, the gentleman that I am.

We walked down to a corner bar, saw some music pumping out and the dimness inside and we made our way to the bar where Martha, who also speaks Spanish, ordered the Cokes to go.

A man at the bar said something to her and she kissed him on the cheek. He then raised his glass, reached in his pocket and took just modify a little amount of it here and there so nobody would ever know. The user would just come up with the wrong answers without even knowing. Or on another version we have developed, it worms right into the computer itself and breaks something deep in its guts. You have to call in a repairman to fix the machine at great expense."

I told you this was amazing. In fact, last fall it was considered so amazing that one of this country's major software companies, Ashton-Tate, purchased twenty percent of the stock of Vault Corporation, expecting big things real soon.

Now, however, just three months later, it turns out that not one single customer has ever shown up to purchase The Worm. People think its un-American. Even Ashton-Tate, which owns twenty percent of the company, took its security business away from Vault and gave it to a company in Santa Clara, California.

"We want to stay as user-friendly as possible." Scott Brown, the Ashton-Tate spokesman said, using a phrase that means they like to keep us customers happy. "The Worm isn't."

A company in Denver, Colorado, Defendisk, had earlier let rumors leak out that it was designing a competitor to the Worm. This week they said they were dropping these plans.

W. Krag Brotby, the chairman of Vault, is philosophical about the turn of events.

"Based on the publicity," he said, "we're waiting for the heat to cool and the light to shine. We're reconsidering exactly to what lengths the product should go. One possibility is to limit the destructive potential to the illegal disk."

Wouldn't it still be possible, a reporter wanted to know, for the Worm, in the case of a malfunction, to be unleashed on a legal disk?

"That is always a possibility," Brotby replied.

To tell you the truth, I was also bothered by the Worm from the moment I first heard about it. Somewhere in a treehouse in the woods of Oregon, some nineteen year old kid wrote this piece of malevolence. My opinion was that there ought to be another kid up in the woods that would write a program to counteract the Worm. You'd put this on your disk, it would trace down the Worm, and it would eat it. This new program would, naturally, be called The Bird.

Well, the Bird is not going to be necessary. There isn't a bad computer person in America.

out an identification card with his picture and his date of birth on it and showed it to Martha. Then Martha gave one cold can of Cola to this man and we we left carrying four other cold cans.

"What was that all about?" I said.

"He said it was his birthday and I should buy him a drink," Martha said. "I said, 'Prove it.' And he did."

Back at the police station, Jack and Andres were nowhere to be found, but I presumed rightly that they were off making a statement. Off to the sides of the waiting area were four interrogation rooms with frosted glass doors so you couldn't see in but above the doors was a small plaque that read "Carpeta." I presumed that this was not where you went to look at rug swatches.

The activity in the police station continued. The Captain now had phones on both ears and in a few minutes Jack, Andres and a police officer appeared from one of the rooms. Andres had a piece of paper with typing on it.

"I just have to get this stamped," he said. "Then we can leave." And he went up to a Lieutenant who stamped it.

We grabbed a cab and headed home. This was a 1955 Buick Special. I know it was a Special because it had three exhaust holes on each fender; the Buick Roadmaster had four that year. I do not know why I remember this insane kind of detail from so long ago.

People were everywhere on the streets and there was lots of music. A man was carrying a four year old on his shoulders, two fifteen year olds were jockeying a small hand wagon along the sidewalk with an old TV on it. Standing alone in the doorway was a woman in full white bridal regalia.

Down toward the water there was a big crowd of people listening to someone in a military uniform make a speech. Havana is a crazy place.

"I wonder who won the game?" I said to Andres.

The next day Chopra, miffed, called NBC to complain. He has a new book out, How to Know God and had flown in from California. In the end NBC said they may or may not run it at a later time. Chopra said he has "turned his disappointment into an experience of reverence and gratitude that makes things happen just as they are supposed to."

Marshal Cogan, the financier who at one time owned "21" is making some changes on the house he bought last year from John Scanlon in Sag Harbor for $2.4 million. He has reportedly filled in where the swimming pool once was and plans to put it in somewhere else on the property because it looks better there. It probably does look better there.

Southampton artist, Michael Perez, owner of Apple Art Gallery, will be exhibiting his Pop/Abstract paintings at the International ArtExpo in New York City, March 9-13.

Faith Bekermus from Westhampton High School and Cynthia Galvin from Hampton Bays High School are the local winners of an essay contest sponsored by the Education Fund of the League of Women Voters of New York State. This competition was open to all high school students and they were asked to write a 1500-word essay, The Steps You Would Take To Increase Citizen Participation in Government. Each local League had an opportunity to select a winner and The League of the Hamptons selected two winners for their outstanding essays.

Tiger Woods has now become a spokesperson for TLC Laser Eye Centers, the world's largest provider of laser vision correction. After his surgery last October he no longer wears contact lenses. Tiger now sees the ball better than ever. The procedure has changed his life. TLC affiliate Dr. Theodore Calabrese in Southampton says that Tiger Woods joins over two million people whose lives have been improved through laser eye surgery.

The soon to open Bridgehampton Starbucks will sponsor the intermission coffee service and dessert at the Boys Choir of Harlem concert to be held on Saturday, April 29 at Southampton High School as a benefit for Bridgehampton Child Care and Recreation Center. Another great Dan's Papers event!

Southampton Inn Presents DISHES

The new Loews Cineplex at 42nd Street and 8th Avenue was the site for the star studded premiere of Academy Award Winning Director John Schlesinger's film The Next Best Thing. The movie, a quirky new comedy about the real meaning of life, stars Madonna and Rupert Everett as her gay best friend, who together parent a child. Madonna was in attendance with her "Guy" ... Guy Ritchie that is, the HOT new British film director. The two are rumored to be quite serious about one another. This was their first public appearance together in the United States and I must say the Star herself was a glowing vision in pink. The film distributed by Paramount Pictures I'm sure will raise a few eyebrows and provoke a few debates. I recommend it highly.

Dan's Papers "I Survived the Winter" Event

On Saturday, March 4th, the new, beautiful state-of-the-art gymnasium at John M. Marshall Elementary in East Hampton was overflowing with happy family faces (numbering over 800!!) who were in attendance for the beloved Dan's Papers "I Survived the Winter" Family Carnival, organized by Linda Shapiro. The monies that were raised as a result of this event benefitted the Pediatric Dental Fund of The Hamptons, the East Hampton ReCenter, and various family oriented activities that are organized by those great people in the Old Montauk Athletic Club.

Wedded Bliss

By Allison Wiley

Undoubtedly, the most important day in a girl's life is her wedding day. She plans for it her entire life, playing dress up, daydreaming about her future mate and her life of wedded bliss. Therefore, this momentous occasion calls for the very best. Whether you're planning a wedding that's traditional, trendy, or budget conscious, we've found just the right service for you:

HIP WEDDING

Bouquet: People are going for a richer, more opulent aesthetic. Try Belle Fleur (212-254-8700) which has provided arrangements for celebrities such as Courtney Cox and fashion houses such as Gucci. Dress: A bride with real style picks a favorite designer or finds a look from the most recent collection or have one custom-designed. Cake: Choose a scenic cake from Sarah Ree's Sugar Box. Their designers will design a cake with hand-painted cookie shapes which are used to decorate the cake. Call 212-475-7463 for an appointment.

CLASSIC WEDDING

Bouquet: Uptown florist Michael George recently opened a new shop entitled Hybrid located inside Bergdorf Goodman (212-753-7300). Tuxedo/Dress:

For a classic tux, head to Brooks Brothers. This institution has three locations in the city (212-682-8800). Downtown dress designer Selia Yang custom designs dresses with an uptown flair (212-254-9073).

Cake: Cake master Ron Ben-Isreal's towering confections start at $1,000 and taste as good as they look. Each cake tier has eight alternating layers of frosting, romantic decorations which are made of sugar and can serve as keepsakes. Call 212-625-3369, or visit www.weddingcakes.com.

BUDGET WEDDINGS

Bouquet: Prudence Designs, Sarah Bernhard's favorite florist, creates a reasonably priced bouquet by using beautiful but slightly less expensive flowers averaging about $65. Contact Pru at 212-691-1356 for more information.

Tuxedo/Dress: Not everyone can afford an Armani tux but you can rent one from Zeller Tuxedo's (800-464-0462) for a nominal fee. LA designer Monah Li will custom design interesting gowns utilizing various fabrics at reasonable rates. Call 323-666-4030 for more information. Try Wearstatt Salon (212-334-9494) for a variety of gowns in various price ranges. Also check out thrift shops and the French Bridal Shop on Fifth Avenue for discounted new, or slightly used, gowns. March 11-13 only, David's Bridal (800-399-2743 or www.davidsbridal.com) is having a bridal sale with selected wedding gowns at $99 and $29-$49 for all previously reduced dresses for bridesmaids and mother of the bride/groom. In addition, thousands of designer gowns will be reduced $50 to $300. By appointment only. Cake: This novel concept, a "cake" made from tiers of cupcakes is a hit with all budgets. Cupcake Café (212-465-1530) will supply the baked goods and New York Cake and Baking (212-675-2253) will supply the tiered cake stand.

NOTE: One-stop bridal shopping at The Hotel Inter-Continental Hotel on Lexington Avenue at 48th Street on Saturday, March 18 from noon to 4 p.m. Over twenty five wedding professionals will be present, including couturier Michelle Roth for Elizabeth Emmanuel, designer of Princess Diana's wedding gown; and Sylvia Weinstock, NYC's renowned cake designer. Gourmet food and drink tastings. Prizes include a honeymoon in Paris, Michelle Roth gown and Oasis Day Spa certificate. $20 per bride/$30 per couple. Shop 'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

This was a real busy weekend for me because my son Randy, his wife Maria and their three daughters came out for a visit. Well, of course you know what we did, shopped 'til we dropped. I showed the girls what I do best, ahem, shop!

Starting out in the Bridgehampton Commons, we went to Payless Shoe Store where there was a great special sale going on. Buy one, get the second pair for half price. Well, I don't have to tell you how many pairs of shoes we left with. Krista found two pair of dressy shoes, Marisa found a pair of sneakers that she loved and a great pair of dress shoes and Alysa got two pair of cute little sandals.

Watermill's Double Rainbow is stocked full of goodies like Godiva chocolates, award winning Double Rainbow ice cream, gift baskets, fresh ground coffee, greeting and holiday cards and gifts. Start placing your orders for your St. Patrick's Day events and get together, call 726-2582.

In Southampton at Hildreth's Department Store on Main Street you can save lots of money on their all weather wicker plus sale. There are discounts up to 25% and then take an extra 10% off on all Lloyd/Flanders until March 19. Also, at Hildreth's you can get a complete decorating and design service.

Looking for that special outfit? Try Kasals on Main Street in Southampton where there are plenty of women's fashions and accessories for every occasion. A great source for the famous Javitz hat!

Job's Lanes Ileana Skin Care is the place to go for the fabulous European Wellness Spa for women and men. Therapeutic oxygen repair treatments, acne treatments, European body wraps, facials and waxing, reflexology and custom make up are among the many beauty specialties here. Don't know what to give that special person for his or her birthday? How about a gift certificate? Call Ileana at 287-1977.

Nearby at Cashmere Outlet, they take extreme pride in offering the finest quality of Scottish Cashmere knitwear for both ladies and men. All are offered at 30% to 40% below retail prices and carry a full line-up from classics to high fashions and hand knits; everything from active daily and cruise wear to evening and holiday fashions. Stop in and browse through the beautiful assortment of sweaters, capes, blankets, styles, scarves and much more.

Also on Jobs Lane, Biba Southampton, sister store to Biba East Hampton, specializes in women's clothing, dresses, shoes for day or evening and playwear in bright colorful prints and styles. Replica jewelry and bright whimsical children's clothing for infants and toddlers too. Krista and Marisa had a great time picking and choosing here and have already decided that this is where they will shop for their Easter outfits. Hey, who can blame them?

On Hampton Road at Artistry in Flowers, in addition to wedding bouquets and centerpieces, there are beautiful floral decorations for all occasions, imported fresh cut flowers, helium and mylar balloons, porcelain and crystal giftware, blooming and tropical plants, interior scaping and a large selection of silk flowers.

At Titano on Nugent Street, where you can find superior men's, women's and children's fine clothing for special occasions. Look for Titano's famous silk shirts and ties for the special guy on your gift list.

Also on Hampton Road at Amazing Parties, your one stop party supply store for birthdays, graduations, and special events. Love the balloon bouquets, arrangements, custom bows and party favors, not to mention the children's entertainment and party planning. Call- 287-9040.

At Arline's Salon at the Omni in Southampton you always get quick, friendly service with a smile and a great cup of coffee. When my do just don't, I'm off to Arline's for the perfect look. Need a quick tan? Tanning is available here as well as waxing, manicures, pedicures and many other services. Call Arline for information and appointments at 283-7472.

Time to end a very nice day of shopping with my three lovely granddaughters. We came home with lots of great clothing and accessories and saved a lot of money too! Well girls, we'll have to do this again soon, after I get that raise, that is!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping.

International Concepts For Spring/Summer 2000

This spring, the message from I.N.C. International Concept is "I.N. Corporate Yourself," with a collection of super looks one needn't be a supermodel to wear. I.N.C. renders the hippest runway looks distinctly wearable, tempting women to show their true selves with everything from stunning colors to pretty, soft detailing to that essential little denim jacket. It's I.N.C. at its best, emphatically feminine uncontrived, easy to incorporate into your own style.

Go to Great Lengths

Pants, both skinny and full, offer options galore, from consummate classic to oh so Boho. From just above the knee to ankle-skimming, I.N.C. bottoms sport solid colors, floral prints and gingham plaid, with hems that are beaded, beribboned, ruffled or fringed. Stretch adds comfort and movement, whether in cotton, twill or denim.

Flirt Alert

Spring is all about the new feminine allure, defined by simple silhouettes adorned with unexpected details...soft, pretty fabrics, prints, and embellishment of all kinds. Floral embroidery appears on both organza and stretch cotton skirts, and a shapely v-neck sheath dress.

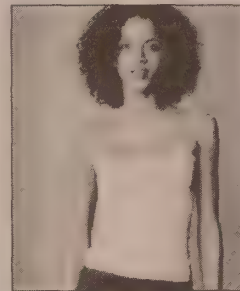

A knee-length pale blue paisley skirt flaunts a flirty ruffle. Knit tops edged with beads and delicate floral appliques, and T-shirts in sheer mesh and tiny floral motifs winsomely offset the clean lines of flood length pants or city shorts. Necklines ruffle in the breeze evoking bohemian chic, while a peasant shirt gets modern shaping with a button front and a bit of stretch.

Color I.In. Corporated

Welcome the new season with a burst of color in flattering shades from cool to warm to bright. It starts with pink, from the palest to deep salmon. Green appears as leaf, citronella, avocado and zucchini, while yellow goes from muted pea to sunny daffodil. Blue is also key to the palette, including deco, steel, turquoise, teal and indigo. All mix together artfully, spark such earthy neutrals as brown, dust and grey, and pop against black, white and silver.

Smart Shopping Suggestions

With so many shopping choices-on Main Street and online-distinguishing one store from the next is becoming more of a challenge for customers everyday. Since retailers know that what matters most is the merchandise they sell, more and more retailers are pursuing "brand" strategies. "Brands" help retailers stand out among their competitors, and keep customers coming back to names they know and trust.

Kmart is one retailer that understands the importance of brand management to its shoppers, featuring an array of popular, national brands at affordable prices as well as exclusive, private label goods. Kmart carries respected national brands that customers have grown to know and depend on, such as Hanes, Rubbermaid, Fuji, Nabisco, Gillette, Fruit of the Loom, Johnson & Johnson and Sara Lee. And the styles and selection of merchandise in each of Kmart's private label brands distinctly reflects the flavor of its name.

The Martha Stewart Everyday brand available exclusively at Kmart, for example, features towels, linens, nursery basics and gardening tools that are as tasteful, high-quality and classic as customers expect Martha Stewart to be.

"Customers recognize Martha Stewart's name. She is known for her style and good taste, and her merchandise shows that. Customers will make special trips to Kmart specifically for Martha Stewart Everyday merchandise," said Steve Ryman, Merchandise Vice President and Brand Manager, Martha Stewart Everyday.

Kmart's exclusive, low priced apparel brands include the Jaclyn Smith collection, which is as beautiful and glamorous as the actress herself; the Kathy Ireland collection, which is aimed toward active, fashion-forward women; Route 66, which features timeless and classic favorites like denim and khaki; and Sesame Street apparel for children that is fun and educational, with embroidered letters and numbers on different pieces.

"Developing brands with recognizable and trusted names helps make customers feel comfortable knowing they are getting quality products. Customers associate certain celebrities with certain values and traits that they like to have reflected in the merchandise they are buying," said Rocco Ingemi, Merchandise Manager for Kmart Ladies' Apparel.

While celebrity endorsement plays a part in brand building, brands are built on reputation and many brands, both private label and national, are accepted by customers because they have been trusted over time. Kmart offers a number of brands that have been familiar to customers for years but have just recently become exclusive private label brands.

White-Westinghouse, for example, is popular with customers for small appliances and electronics, Thom McAn is recognized for comfortable, durable footwear and American Fare sporting goods are favorites of outdoor enthusiasts.

By offering both national and private label brands, retailers not only give their customers reasons to keep shopping their particular stores, they offer their customers competitive value, greater selection, the comfort of recognizable, nationally-known brand names and the differentiation of unique private label brands.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

THE ARTISTS ALLIANCE AT MILLENNIUM, PART I

Continuing with its commitment to present annual shows by the Artists Alliance of East Hampton, the Millennium Gallery has done a fine job organizing over 100 works (included in two separate exhibits). The first part, which primarily features figure studies and sea subjects, seems particularly relevant, too, because it's also running concurrently with Guild Hall's Annual Members Show. Some artists, therefore, will have their pieces at two different venues simultaneously— not an everyday occurrence to be sure.

First, the figure imagery. Many works at the Millennium present surprises, specifically dealing with body contours/compositions that are off-center, both literally and figuratively (pardon the pun). For example, while Marie Russo's elongated couple still conveys the artist's characteristic gestural style, there's an edge to it here, a more abstract and questioning thrust (regarding gender).

Ruth Nasca's "Golden Chair" is also gestural in nature but the female's slightly grotesque, shifting face is unlike many of the artist's former figures. Ms. Nasca is going someplace else with this piece (and probably others like it), a more defined Surrealism. We'd like to see more. Lou Stevens' "Nude #1," a hand colored photograph, is equally edgy, with its unique point-of-view.

Jay Throne's purple-haired woman, with her one leg disappearing from sight, is another example of a quirky representation, where we want to know this person's "story." Roland Cicurel's female figure has an "attitude" as well, her facial expressions and colors blending to form an effective disharmony.

Secondly, the sea/nature subjects on display. They, too, offer surprises although we wouldn't label them "edgy." Rae Ferren's "Ebb Flow" is a gem, and while not as narrative as Ms. Ferren's paintings can be, it is still charming and uplifting. Bernice Faegenburg's "Harbor" is an unusual mixture of media which works well together to create an impressionistic water view; Alice Mcevoy's "Happiness Is" also recalls a more impressionistic style. Its subject, a fisherman with his boat, reminds one of England's Walter Langley, a Newlyn Art Colony pioneer living in Penzance (circa early 1900s).

While Eunice Golden's "Sea and Sand" offers a surprise, not mirroring her past figure studies at all, there's the promise of a new spatial direction, nonetheless. Intriguing use of space/ colors pervades other works, too, including Joe Bucci's "Ocean Edge," Bruce Nagel's photograph, "Stone Steps," Anna Falco- Lane's sculpture, "Annus," Maxwell Pike's stone piece, "Artic Motion," and Ruth Cohen's abstract, "Untitled."

Part 1 of this exhibit will be on view at East Hampton's Millennium Gallery until March 17. Part 2 will open on March 18.

HONORING THE ARTIST: JERRY McLAUGHLIN

When asked to explain the meaning of his work on this week's Dan's Papers cover, artist Jerry McLaughlin answered unexpectedly, "I never know what I do. No one does." As the conversation continued, we began to appreciate Mr. McLaughlin's quip and his no-nonsense candor and wisdom even more so.

While the idea that art is unexplainable isn't particularly new, it's why Mr. McLaughlin holds this belief which is unique. "Art is a felt thing; it's almost impossible to get to the nut of art," the artist continues. "I do three dimensional objects, reminiscent of things we know about, but they're not recognizable. The object only hints at what it is."

We're intrigued. Mr. McLaughlin could be talking about any number of "things" in the universe. We're on the right track, however, when we imagine the entire world. He does, in fact, capture the whole cosmos in his work. "I love astronomy, physics," Mr. McLaughlin explains. "The great spooky stuff that science represents in general. The earth is laden with beautiful things."

Mr. McLaughlin narrows this earthly attraction for us: "I like the ocean, down in the deep, the microscopic life, symmetrical and very beautiful. It's a great big feast for the eyes and mind to contemplate. When I paint undersea objects, I capture this principle of life."

Obviously, Mr. McLaughlin doesn't think much of "above the sea" art.

"The contemporary art scene is art about art," he comments. "What I do is more spiritual; I feel things very deeply."

Where does Mr. McLaughlin's penchant for science and its universal secrets come from, we wonder? "When I was growing up, most kids were reading about busty girls, the usual stuff," he notes. "I was reading about science. I lived in California in the mountains. I would look at the night sky and see something beyond awesome. I would see infinity."

Profound mysteries continued to interest Mr. McLaughlin. He entertained the idea of becoming a psychiatrist, but soon concluded that such a person was just someone who fumbled around "like the rest of us."

During World War II, he was still pursuing science as a fire controllman on a destroyer in the South Pacific, drawing portraits and Christmas cards for an artistic outlet.

At sea, in the middle of nowhere on nightly watches, McLaughlin first started to respect the ocean, contemplating life and death. Taking a look once more at Mr. McLaughlin's work, we can see more clearly his intentions and inspirations: his strange life forms; large, floating spheres; his evolutionary thrust.

No matter what Mr. McLaughlin may have done since those days in the Navy (he was an art director at a top advertising agency and studied at Chicago's Art Institute), he is still preoccupied with the mysteries of the universe. "I could have made a lot of money if I had stayed in advertising," he says now. "But I wasn't nourishing what I wanted."

Advertising's loss is our gain.

Vermont's Finest: Popcorn Behavior

From Brattleboro Vermont, the heartland of New England dance music, springs Popcorn Behavior, an extraordinarily gifted and dynamic quartet of young traditional musicians.

Popcorn Behavior will be performing this Friday at 7:30 at the First Presbyterian Church, at 2 South Main Street in Southamptn. Advance tickets are $15, at the door is $20. Call 283-2494 for reservations Formed by teenage brothers Sam (fiddle) and Stefan Amidon (percussion) and their friend Thomas Bartlett (piano) in 1993, the boys gained instant notoriety on the Northeastern folk music and contradance scenes for their energy, passion and a mastery of their craft far beyond their years. Dancers, listeners and reviewers of their first two recordings "Popcorn Behavior" (1994) and "Journeywork" (1997) were transfixed both by the bands devotion to tradition and their edginess which fans the traditional flame. Now with the inspired addition of neighbor and mentor, Newfoundland-born singer/guitarist Keith Murphy for their latest album "Strangest Dream" fresh fuel has been added to Popcorn Behavior's fire, one which will be heating up festival stages and concert halls as well as dance floors for years to come.

Sons of well-known Brattleboro-based folksingers Peter and Mary Alice Amidon, Sam and Stephan are seasoned veterans, having toured with The Amidon family across the United States and Europe since their earliest years. Sam, a committed fiddler from the age of three, is now among the most highly regarded in the Northeast's crowded field of Irish-style players, while younger brother Stephan's singular approach to the Mideastern dumbek is only the best-known souvenir of his many continuing adventures in the percussion world. The group's prolific tunesmith Thomas Bartlett, from nearby Westminster, initiated his own classical piano lessons at age six, but only a scant dozen years later his extraordinary talents find him in demand as a theater accompanist, performing solo piano recitals, and earning top honors in concerto competitions. With his trademark driving guitar, mandolin and Quebecois-style footwork, Keith Murphy of the highly-regarded trio Nightingale brings both musical energy and stage-wise artistry to his remarkable vocal presence and songs which are a welcome addition to the ever-expanding Popcorn mix. Increasingly, a Popcorn Behavior set is apt to find the band following an incendiary Celtic reel medley with an artfully arranged folk-pop vocal, followed by a modal jazz-flavored and groove-driven foray into the riveting labyrinth of world music.

Listeners and dancers love them. Respected musicians admire them. Critics and fans are unanimous: "Playful.. inventive.., prodigious... intense... virtuosic.., smashing... superb...". And as one reviewer voices it for all of them, "But where do they go from here?"

MAYOR KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

This is a brilliant film. Yet many of the people who see it will find it tedious or even boring. On the other hand, the very reason for the negative reactions – which will basically be the slow pace of the dialogue and action – is the very reason the film succeeds for those of us who are blown away by its audacity and diamond hard brilliance.

The story is about two sisters, Rivka and Malka, who live with their family in Jerusalem. While the film never actually identifies the religious sect the family belongs to, it is probably those who live in the Mea Shearim sector of Jerusalem.

The violence perpetrated by that group usually takes the form of closing off the streets so as to prevent vehicular traffic on the Sabbath, but that is not part of the film.

Here the violence is directed at the two women

by the culture.

In the case of Rivka (Yael Abecassis), who has been married for 10 years to Meir (Yoram Hattab), she is scorned by the community because they believe she is barren. Ultimately Meir divorces Rivka because they have no children. In fact, a doctor tells Rivka that it is Meir who is unable to beget children.

As Rivka and Meir, who have a deep love for each other, give into the demands of a culture that requires every couple to have children, the enormous pain they experience will wring your heart. Not to have children, regardless of the reason, is considered to be an attack on the community, and is always perceived as the fault of the woman.

The younger daughter Malka (Meital Barda) is in love with a man who has left the fold of the sect and is now a folk singer. She is compelled by her father to marry Yossef (Uri Ran-Klausner), who she does not like and who is boorish in his manners.

The loving tender sexual moments between Rivka and Meir are contrasted with the sexual violence of the first night after marriage perpetrated by the Yossef on Meir.

How the two sisters react to the trauma visited upon them by the mores of the fundamentalist community that they have been born into is brilliantly realized by the film.

You do not have to be Jewish to love this film but it helps.

Buying The Perfect Diamond

Diamond Buying Guide: Cutting Down Diamond Advertising Myths

By Keri Wall

Diamonds are the traditional stone for engagement rings, and the advertising of them can certainly color opinions of the stone. Educate yourself on diamonds and find out your fiancé's jewelry preferences. This will go a long way towards finding the perfect combination between price, quality and size.

Let start with the "two month's salary" myth: Simply put, you do not have to put two month's worth of salary towards the purchase of an engagement ring. Some arbitrary number does not mean you love your fiancé any less or any more than someone else.

Next comes the advertisement stating "Diamonds are forever." The fact is that diamonds can break. They are the hardest gem on the MOHS hardness scale, but as with other stones, diamonds have their weaknesses. A diamond has four directions of cleavage (also called perfect cleavage). If it receives a blow in any of these four directions, it can split. To be fair, most diamonds are set in a manner that this become unlikely, but the possibility is certainly there regardless.

"Surprise her with a diamond," is another advertisement you may notice. This advertisement has one main objective and that is to get you into the store/jeweler to purchase a diamond. Sounds fine on the surface, but you will likely buy a bigger or more expensive diamond than your fiancé might actually want... and that's exactly the idea. It's only by actually talking with or observing your fiancé that you find out his or her preferences. After the fact is too late, as they will (out of their love for you!) accept anything you buy them whether it is what they would have preferred or not. Simply find out your fiancé's general preferences. Below is a small list to guide you in doing just that.

1. Does your fiancée like wearing jewelry (specifically rings) at all? If not, a small stone or a setting that doesn't get in the way may be appropriate.

2. If your fiancé does wear jewelry, does he or

5. What color of metal does your fiancé's jewelry consist of? This will help you when choosing the setting of the stone. If she always wears white gold rather than yellow gold, it is very likely that she would enjoy a white gold setting better.

The above will give you somewhere to start, and whether you buy the diamond with or without your fiancé present, you'll have a much better idea of her preferences. "Surprise her with a Diamond" is also the advertisement that encourages going out on a whim and purchasing a diamond without researching the subject first. A bit more subtle of an approach, but this encouragement is often enough for a person with absolutely no knowledge to "listen to the salesperson" as they convince you to buy the most expensive item in your budget.

"Only Diamonds will do" is the final advertisement that should be covered. Again, by actually finding out your fiancé's preferences you will know whether this is true or not. Some people simply do not like diamonds. They would prefer another gemstone, and though they will appreciate the thought behind the ring they won't love it as much as they might have loved something else.

Others do prefer diamonds, but they may like the way that diamonds look with another stone. Others do believe that only diamonds will do. The only way to find out if this is correct in your case is to ask your fiancé.

Educate yourself on diamonds and find out your fiancé's jewelry preferences. This will go a long way towards finding the perfect combination between price, quality and size.

she tend to favor large or small jewelry? This can be a gauge as to the size of stone she would prefer.

3. Is your fiancée more interested in size or quality of jewelry? This can tell you whether to buy quality over size and vice versa.

4. Does your fiancée even like diamonds, or does she prefer other gemstones? You may be better off discussing the purchase with your fiancée to insure that you buy something she wants to wear.

What To Do With Out-Of-Town Guests For Your Wedding

By Valerie De Santi

It seems that the last thing that brides and grooms think about when they decide to get married in the Hamptons, on-season or off, is where their guests will stay if they are coming from off-island. They could be coming from as near as Nassau County, or as far away as California, Europe or the Orient. Today's couples are cosmopolitan, cross-cultural and often from other parts of the country. Getting married in the Hamptons is a very exciting idea, but most guests wind up travelling from afar for the special day.

I have worked with couples whose guests number as few as fifteen and as many as 300, but the issue is very much the same. Where can they stay? Often the guests coming the farthest are the easiest to accommodate because they usually stay for a few days. It's the people who come to the July/August wedding from within driving distance, and only want to stay over one night that have the most problems. We try and offer options for everyone.

If you are still planning your big day and have not yet set the date, I often suggest that summer weddings take place other than on Saturdays – preferably Thursday, Friday or Sunday. You can save some money, guests can stay for as long or as short as they like, and, of course, the traffic is less of an issue. The off-season used to be before Memorial Day or after Labor Day, but the wedding season seems to be extending into these periods. So, the long and the short of it is that guests need to book accommodations well in advance of the six-week invitation mailing.

Some wedding planners use a "Save the Date" letter as a way of dealing with high profile weddings. Everyone who will be invited to the wedding gets a letter about six months in advance with details of the event, so they have time to make plans. It usually includes the location of the ceremony and reception, the names of adjacent localities (you don't have to stay in the same town), the nearest airport and any other pertinent information that would help guests make appropriate plans.

There are basically two types of accommodations in the Hamptons. The large commercial motel-type places (in Southampton, East Hampton and Sag Harbor) or small private accommodations, like Bed & Breakfasts and small inns (up to ten rooms). When I speak with brides, they are either trying to amass as many rooms of any kind that they can find (which requires a deposit to hold

The Gown

Finding The Perfect Dress For All Different Body Types And Sizes

By Ashlee Smith

So, you are already for the "big day." The church has been picked out. The hall is lined up. You have your photographer and limo. But one thing still remains – the DRESS. That's right, the one thing that many guests, not to mention yourself, will remember when all is said and done. Here are a few ideas:

Second Marriage – Everybody has a different opinion as to the colors worn by the second-time bride, but that's just what they are: opinions. Much has changed over the last several years, and it's harder to apply rules that were made up years ago.

Weddings are a celebration of two people's love and a commitment to a stronger bond. As a celebration, a bride should wear what makes her feel special, and she should avoid something that makes her feel self-conscious. If you think you will spend time worrying about what other people think by choosing pure white, then don't choose it. Ivory is an acceptable alternative. You may also wish to consider a champagne or rum pink, colors that look great on fair skin.

You may also wish to choose a dress that features touches of color. Wedding gowns with touches of pale pink or champagne accents can provide a fresh new perspective.

Overweight Bride – Most stores order their samples in one or two "typical" sizes, meaning everyone that doesn't fit within these categories will have to guess what the gown will really look like when it arrives in their size. This means you will have to do a little research in your area to find a store that specializes in catering to a wider variety of women's sizes.

Before you and your mom head out for a day of shopping, get a phone book from your area and any other surrounding areas. Call and ask bridal salons how many gowns they have available in your size, and be as specific as you can as to what style of gown you are interested in. If they only have one or two gowns, it may not be worth a visit if it's not at all the style you are interested in. Also call the regular dress boutiques in your area that specialize in larger sizes and ask them if they can recommend any bridal salons. They probably have heard of other customers struggling with a similar situation and may be able to point you in a good direction. Another type of store to look into are the warehouse-style bridal stores. They have a lot of gowns in different sizes. It's possible that this store has a gown you want in your size (just make sure you inspect the gown carefully before buying as they are usually sold as is.)

You've also made a smart decision in ordering your dress in your current size. It's much easier to take a dress in to a smaller size and make it look good than to let out a dress that is too small. Be picky when it comes time to do the

Think of your wedding look as a picture frame – your dress being the bottom part and the headpiece and veil being the other three sides.

alterations. If you don't feel comfortable with the seamstress' ideas about what can be done to make the dress fit, then take it to someone else for another opinion. The fitting of a gown is what makes the dress the most flattering to you. It's can overwhelm brides who are shorter. If you like dresses with fuller skirts, look for ones with box pleats because they give you the fullness at the bottom, the long vertical lines in the skirt, and the sleeker style that won't overpower you. • best to find a seamstress whose workmanship you trust.

The Right Veil – Try on several styles to see what feels the most natural to you. Brides with short hair look best in headband styles or small, unfussy tiara shapes. Think of your wedding look as a picture frame – your dress being the bottom part and the headpiece and veil being the other three sides. The main focus should ultimately be your face, so headpieces that are too busy or fussy can draw attention away. A headband or tiara-style would sit more vertically on your head than a halo or wreath style and would look more natural in shorter hair. The veil itself should come from the top of your head rather than lower in the back of your head, so it makes more sense with your hair and provides the perception of height. I don't think the fullness of the veil matters – that's up to your personal taste. I like a fuller, two-tier veil on most people because it gives a little more drama and frames the face on the sides. If your dress has a full skirt, then I would recommend trying veil lengths that are waist-length or even slightly shorter. Where the veil ends in the back should be below any low back but above where the skirt starts, so that it doesn't create any visual traffic jams with any of the gown's strategic spots.

Wedding Gowns for Petite Brides – Petite brides have more options now than ever before. The styles that provide an illusion of height are those with long, vertical but flowing lines. A-line gowns or princess-seamed gowns offer a smooth long line. Sheath styles, though they sometimes seem like they'd be the perfect design, are often cut to a tall person's proportions. On a shorter person, if the waist is too low, it can look as if the bride is cut in half. Look for styles that have more interest at the top of the gown, as they draw the eye upward. Gowns with a lot of appliques all over tend to chop up the appearance more. Waistlines shouldn't be too low, or they will make your legs look short. Look for natural waistlines or empire waistlines. These usually work best. I wouldn't recommend a really "poofy" skirt (i.e. tulle) as they can look out of proportion on petite brides.

Tips On What To Look For And What To Ask When Finding Your Photographer

By Chris Treudler

So there's going to be a wedding! I'm sure you have a number of things that you would like to know about wedding photography before the wedding.

"Brides should first choose a photographer based on the style of photos you want – traditional, photo journalistic, fashion shoot style or some combination. These pictures will be part of your lives memories. Look at the photographer's book and put yourself in those pictures to see if it is what you want. Also get a written estimate before you choose. The estimate must include all costs and options and include a list of the photos you expect to be taken. This helps you to find out exactly what your costs are and lets the photographer know what you expect. Don't be shy, ask questions, each wedding is different and your options are limitless," says Tom Ratcliffe of Unique Photography in Sag Harbor (631-725-7643).

You have hired a professional photographer to take beautiful and memorable pictures of your special day. It is important that the professional be allowed to do his very best. To this end, please ask your friends and family to be sure and wait until the photographer has finished taking his pictures before they start shooting. This is especially important during the formal pictures at the church in front of the altar and at the reception during the cake cutting. There are two reasons for this; first of all the photographer composes the formal pictures as well as those at the reception to produce the best images possible for your album.

Secondly, in most cases, a professional photographer uses more than one flash unit both on the formal and cake cutting pictures. These other units are called "slaves" which means they light up just at the instant the flash goes off on the camera. The light from other people's camera flashes will also trigger the "slave" to flash. The "slave" is battery powered and requires a few seconds to recycle for the next flash. If the flash has just gone off from another person's flash, the photographer might miss a good picture or you will get pictures where his flash did not fire because it did not have time to recycle – thus a bad picture.

Before your wedding day, the couple should sit down with members of your wedding party, family, and friends and draw up a list of pictures you want to have in your album and to give to others as gifts. In addition, family and friends will want to have pictures also. The photographer should have a standard set of pictures which he takes for most albums, but he has no way of knowing your special needs if you don't tell him. You may want formal pictures with certain people – a special friend or relative, for example, or you may want an informal picture at the reception with a special person. It's always best to give him a written list of pictures you want taken well in advance of the wedding day so you can go over it with him. Some photographers will have a check off list which shows the pictures that they usually take. In addition, there should be space on the form for you to add your special requests.

To cut down on the time it takes to do the formal pictures, right after leaving the wedding ceremony you and members of your wedding party get out of sight by going downstairs or into a side room. After the church is emptied, all those participating in the formal pictures then return to the altar area and the photographing can proceed very quickly. If you would like to have a receiving line, this could be held later at the reception.

Before the wedding, assign a friend or family member to help the photographer locate the people who are to be in each of the formal pictures. It may be necessary to have two helpers; one for the groom's family and one for the bride's. Sometimes, someone – a groomsman or a parent, for instance – may leave the sanctuary and this can hold up the photography for quite some time while the search is on to locate them. The photographer is often accused of taking a long time to do the formals, when in fact it was the people being photographed who caused the delay. Please request that all those who are to be in the formal pictures, remain in the sanctuary, or, if they must leave, to let the "helper" know where they are.

One way to get additional candid pictures of your reception is to place the little, one-time-use, throw away cameras with flash on each of the guest tables and ask them to take pictures. They return the cameras to you at the end of the reception, you have them developed and printed and then have more pictures than you ever dreamed of having. We have these cameras for sale at our studio. They are attractively packaged with a wedding design of ribbons, flowers and rings.

Special precautions at the reception for the background behind the wedding cake will result in better pictures. Avoid shiny walls, mirrors, windows, exit or no smoking signs, coats racks, etc. The best backgrounds are plain walls or drapes.

Adding wall decorations or bordering the cake table with flowers can add a lovely frame and color to the cake cutting pictures. Wall decorations could include ribbons, paper bells, streamers, balloons or just a pastel drape – all of which define and frame the area.

If you use flowers in the church that are arranged in pedestal baskets, these can be placed at the ends of the cake table, if there is room. They add to the occasion and bring in more of your colors to the several important pictures that are taken at the cake table. It is best to not have any balloons on the cake table itself because they will cast shadows onto the bride and groom from any side lighting that is used.

At the reception, after the cake has been cut, you should set up an artistic arrangement to show your wedding rings on your hands. Included in this image are the bride's bouquet, the top of the wedding cake, the signed wedding certificate, the wine or toasting glasses, and any other small remembrances of the day. This results in a very popular picture for the album.

Arrange for someone to bring the wedding certificate to the reception so that it may be included in the photograph. This is a good assignment for the mother or father of the groom who can sometimes feel a bit left out as far as helping out on the wedding day.

Confessions Of A Wedding Caterer

By Shari Alexander

The bride's family was sheepishly clinging to the side of the walls of the mansion; fear was blazing in their eyes. "Get those hors d'oeuvres out before they get cold," I screamed at the waiters. "Like a few shrimp are going to make them happy?" was the retort from a surly server. The wind was like a whirling dervish, spraying cold water all over the terrace, knocking over cocktail glasses and flinging hors d'oeuvres off the trays.

Over 100 guests were freezing, soggy and totally miserable. The bride wanted her guests to enjoy cocktails and canapés on the terrace overlooking the bay, under no conditions were they to come into the grand ballroom until the last flower arrangement was poofed and perfect!

Could it get any worst than this... YES! The lady responsible for place cards forgot them on the plane from New Mexico, disheveled guests were now milling around inside looking for their appropriate seats. I was still trying to push those damn canapés, by this time the guests would have been happier with terry cloth robes than meatballs!

Dinner was a symphony of total confusion, the vegetarians who had sent back cards ordering the salmon or Vegan plates saw the luscious succulent prime rib, wanted it and swore that was what they chose.

The father of the groom was drunker than a skunk and swore some one carried off his expensive champagne. The bride's mother wanted to know why we ran out of prime rib. The groom's men all looked like they were FBI and trust me... I just wanted to push a hole out the bottom and drop through a hole.

From the corner of my eye I saw the truly lovely bride and her handsome new husband look deeply into each other's eyes with the glow that only new love could bring. Sigh, I am indeed a romantic.

Four hours later the bride and groom smothered me with kisses telling me it was the most wonderful beautiful wedding in the world. Go Figure!

Forever Memories

Videos Are A Must Have At Weddings These Days

By Kathy Rae

Nowadays, a video is a must have at weddings. Fun to have for the future, it is also nice to pass on to generations to come.

20/20 Video Vision says "When talking to your videographer make sure you know what your package includes: Brides house, ceremony, park, reception. How many edited tapes and do the tapes include pictorial montage and recap." If you would like to contact Video Vision for any further questions, call 631-451-8912.

If you are still unsure on whether to book a videographer or not, here are some questions you should ask yourself.

Why should I have my wedding videotaped?

There is nothing like a professionally made videotape to capture all the sights and sounds of your wedding day, an event which has become one of the major social events in a person's life. What better opportunity to capture all of your family and friends and create a classic heirloom to be cherished for years to come?

Can't a friend or family member videotape my wedding?

Certainly, but don't expect professional results. You should look for professional 3-chip cameras, S-VHS mastering, titling, special effects generators, computer-based digital non-linear editing equipment, professional microphones, tripods, and plenty of backup equipment to create a true television production..

Won't the cameramen be obtrusive and disruptive?

You should request that your videographer makes every effort to record your wedding unobtrusively and tastefully, using no lights at the ceremony, remaining stationary and silent throughout, and using a documentary style in all of our taping.

How should I choose a videographer?

It's a fact of life that price plays a key role in determining your selection of professionals, and there is a photographer and videographer for every budget. Once you determine your spending limit, then you can begin to evaluate your professionals for quality, experience and compatibility. A professional 3-chip camera is a must if you are to get true broadcast quality.

Also, a minimum of two cameras for proper coverage should be used, as well as professional microphones and lighting equipment. Ask your prospective videographer what equipment he or she will use at your wedding, and specifically who will be operating that equipment. Ask to see a sample of that person's work. Don't merely watch promotional videos – ask to see actual weddings with actual sound, preferably taped in the same locations as your upcoming event.

Will my photographer and a videographer work together?

Wedding videography is relatively new, only coming into its own in the past ten years. Generally, photographers and videographers get along just fine. In our own experience, we have even become close friends with our colleagues, and problems have been few and far between.

You should be aware that there are still some photographers that resent the rapid onslaught video has made on the market. Remember: your photographer and videographer are working for YOU on YOUR wedding day, so be sure to let ALL of your vendors know exactly what level of cooperation YOU expect. Your wedding day is not the time for a clash of artistic egos.

Should I sign a contract?

A contract protects both you and the videographer,

Wedding Bouquet Styles

By Keri Wall

Wedding bouquets come in a variety of shapes or styles. It can often be confusing to sort them all out, and make sure you tell your florist exactly what type of bouquet you are looking for. The below descriptions cover the most common styles as well as a few styles that are gaining in popularity. Each shape is explained, and common characteristics are included.

Arm bouquet: A bouquet which is designed to be held in the crook of the arm. Consists of long-stemmed flowers, with long stemmed roses and calla lilies being the most popular. A loosely tied ribbon or bow is sometimes used to keep the bouquet together.

Cascade bouquet: Also called a waterfall bouquet. This bouquet style is in the shape of a teardrop or a loose triangle. In general, it is slightly rounded at the top and falls to a point. This bouquet has become popular in recent years.

Freeform bouquet: This bouquet often has no discernible shape. As the name implies, this style covers a looser bouquet that often has flowers or greenery coming out at various angles. Spray bouquets are an example of this style, as they generally "spray" in different directions.

Hand-tied bouquet: Similar to an arm bouquet, with the main difference being the flowers and presentation. Sometimes, you will find roses, but you are just as likely to find other flowers. This bouquet is tied with a ribbon. The ribbon is occasionally decorated with notions such as pearl accents. It can be loosely tied or tightly tied, depending on the look you prefer.

Heart bouquet: Consist of flowers making up two rounded tops and coming down to a point. They are housed in a round bouquet holder. The extra space is generally filled in with gypsum or baby's breath. The effect is that of a heart shape. This type of bouquet gained a slight following in the eighties.

Nosegay bouquet: In general, nosegays follow the same shape as a round bouquet. They are usually smaller, and sometimes include the addition of ribbon streamers. They are not as dense as a round bouquet, and may include more greenery. As a result of their smaller size, nosegay bouquets tend to show more trim from the bouquet holder as well. These bouquets are a popular choice for the smaller bridesmaid bouquets or for flower girl bouquets.

Oval bouquet: It mixes a cascade style bouquet with that of a round bouquet. The shape has a less strict form than a cascade bouquet, and is also more rounded. The rounded top comes down in size to a more rounded bottom than that of a Cascade bouquet.

Round bouquet: As the name suggests, this bouquet is circular in shape. It is filled with mostly florals, but can also contain greenery. This condensed bouquet holds a large number of flowers in a compact space. In general, the bouquet is held together in a round bouquet holder. The bouquet holder may or may not have a lace or netting trim surrounding it.

Single stem: While this is a very simple and elegant look, it is not technically a bouquet as it consists of only one flower. It is only in the past few years that I have noticed a trend towards using only a single flower in place of a bouquet. By far, the calla lily seems the most popular. A long stemmed rose is occasionally used instead. This stem is used in the same manner as the arm bouquet, and is generally placed in the crook of one's arm.

and should be comprehensive and clear. Don't hire any professional with merely a verbal agreement.

Will they use wireless microphones?

Most can do it both ways – wired and wireless. A wired microphone will yield better audio reproduction but it takes more time and effort to set up on location. Wireless microphones offer a quicker setup, and it is usually the groom who is chosen to wear the lavalier "clip-on." Don't worry – most hide all the cable and tape it down so does not get in the way.

Be sure to check with your church or synagogue to see if there are any restrictions on the use of wireless equipment.

What if my church has restrictions on video?

It is the client's responsibility to find out if there are any restrictions on photography and videography wherever the event takes place and to notify the studio well in advance. Many churches and synagogues have guidelines, such as no flash photography and no moving around during the ceremony, and understandably so. A place of worship is not a television studio.

Most strive to place a camera in a position which affords a clear view of your faces during the ceremony. This is not always possible because some churches restrict all videotaping to the balcony only. Be sure to find out what is allowed before you contract with a videographer or a photographer.

Many videographers will ask for access to the site of the ceremony one hour prior to the scheduled starting time in order to set up their cameras and microphones and to make a proper test of all the equipment and also many times churches sometimes fail to schedule enough time between events, so be sure to find out exactly how much time you will have access to the site before and after the ceremony. Photographers, videographers, florists and other vendors need sufficient time to do their best work.

When should taping begin?

Typically begin a wedding day with a visit to the bride's home or other location where preparations are being made. Some of the most emotional and special shots have been made as the bride and her attendants are getting ready. Many spend anywhere from five to twelve hours covering one wedding, but seven hours is usually sufficient to get complete coverage of an average wedding.

What should I look for in a professional videotape?

The picture and sound should be crystal clear. The titles should look professional and be easily read. The production should be tightly and tastefully edited, making the tape more enjoyable to watch than real time raw footage. Special effects should be enhancements to the production and not appear "gimmicky." The most important element to shop for is the actual videographer, whose experience and talents are what you really want.

How long will the finished tape be?

Usually between forty-five minutes to one hour.

What is in-camera editing?

In-camera editing is merely pausing and starting the videotape in the camera as events warrant and then handing the tape over at the end of the day.

Many shoot a lot of footage to ensure that we capture all the special moments and then use our post-production editing suite to complete the tape, adding music, titles and special effects.

Should I provide a meal for the videographers?

It's the right thing to do. After all, they are on the job for sometimes up to twelve hours between the time they arrive at the bride's home and the time they leave the reception. It is a welcome courtesy if you provide a meal for your photographers and videographers, and to provide it quickly so that we are ready to work again at a moment's notice.

Don't feed your vendors last because you will probably want shots of the newly married couple as they greet their guests at the tables. If you cannot provide a meal, they will need to take an off-site meal break sometime during the reception.

What about those obtrusive interviews?

That's up to you really. Be sure to let them know if you want interviews or not.

the rooms), or they are trying to compile a list of places, with phone numbers and room prices, so they can send out this list to guests. In either case, they wind up disoriented, confused and frustrated, and sometimes broke from the deposits. The last thing you need to do is tie up your money on reservation deposits, and recommending places to stay that you have never seen. You have no idea if they are clean and comfortable, near to the action or totally wrong for your guest. And you have other things to do - flowers, entertainment, reception menu, logistics of ceremony-to-reception, seating arrangements, etc., etc., etc. I heartily recommend a reservation service to assist your guests in finding accommodations.

East Egg Reservations has been operating now for four years. We work with about thirty different accommodations from small guest houses to the large commercial places to the snazziest B&B's available. Brides usually put us in the "Save the Date" letter as a way to secure accommodations. Then guests can call us directly at their convenience. When working on weddings, we keep a file of the particulars (where, when 'and who) so we know where to place people. Then we spend time finding out what the guests expect to do while they are here. Some want the "express" visit (in and out ASAP), some want to treat it as a vacation, want to play golf or just go to the beach. Budget is a very complicated issue. If guests are speaking to the bride/groom, they don't wish to appear cheap, so sometimes they spend more on accommodations than they would like. If they speak with us, they can be quite candid about their needs.

Some people love B&B's, some want as big and commercial as they can get. Who will share a bath, who won't. Who wants to stay with other guests, who wants to be as far away from other relatives as they can get. We also make arrangements to get them here from airports, NYC or wherever they are coming from. We deal directly with the guests, and all financial transactions are done with them.

This process frees you up to focus on your special day. Your guests get personal attention and lots of service. We send written confirmation of their reservation, directions from where they are to where they are staying. We make tee times, restaurant reservations and suggest things to do in the "downtime" between events.

And you have no financial commitment. You get to spend your money on the event itself.

We are here to help you enjoy your most important day, and to help your guests enjoy your wedding and the area.

Call Valerie De Santi at East Egg Reservations, 631-287-0865, for any information.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

This is a tale of two meals where much of the cooking is done for one meal. When buying a piece of salmon, for instance, one of the most popular fish to cook at home, it's a good idea to purchase twice as much as you'll need.

For dinner, one evening, I cooked a salmon fillet seasoned with freshly grated ginger, a bit of raw sugar, kosher salt, grainy mustard and a splash of soy sauce. For another meal, there was sufficient salmon left over to add to a sautéed vegetable to serve with freshly cooked linguini. If a bit more salmon is leftover after preparing the pasta, toss it with chopped scallions, lemon juice and some mayo for a salad.

Versatile leafy green Swiss Chard made a wonderful accompaniment for the salmon fillet while their fleshy stalks, usually cooked separately, were used for the pasta dish. For the leaves I sautéed finely chopped shallots in a bit of olive oil until just translucent, added the rinsed and dried greens, tossed them to coat in the oil until wilted then seasoned the greens with salt, pepper and a squeeze of lemon juice. Two days later I trimmed the chard stems for the pasta, cut them into pieces and sautéed them with shallots until tender. They lent an appealing flavor and texture to the linguini and leftover salmon.

ROAST SALMON FILLET WITH GINGER, MUSTARD AND SOY CRUST

Salmon is loved for its versatility and in the minds of most cooks it is easy to prepare. The recipe will make 4-6 servings or leftovers are creatively available for another meal for two.

2 - 2-1/2 pounds center cut salmon fillet

1 - 2 tablespoons freshly grated ginger
1 - 2 teaspoons coarse (kosher) salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tablespoons raw (turbinado) brown sugar
1 heaping tablespoons grainy Dijon mustard
2 teaspoons light soy sauce

1. Place whole fillet on a flat baking pan for cooking.
2. Peel a 2-inch knob of ginger and grate it into a small mixing bowl. Add salt, pepper, brown sugar and mustard and stir to mix. Spread mixture over the salmon to evenly coat. Can do up to 30 minutes ahead. Just before roasting sprinkle with the soy sauce.

Preheat oven to 450 degrees

3. Roast the filet for 12-15 minutes until springy to the touch. Let rest for a few minutes and slice into desired portions. Serve on a bed of cooked Swiss chard greens

LINGUINI WITH SALMON AND SWISS CHARD STEMS

If not using previously cooked salmon fillet, purchase 1 1/2 pound boneless fillet and cut into 1-inch pieces. The salmon cooks quickly with the sautéed vegetables.

Serves 4 - 6

1/2 pound cooked or fresh boneless salmon fillet
1/2-2/3 pound Swiss chard stems from one large bunch
2 tablespoons olive oil

1 tablespoon unsalted butter
1 large shallot, finely chopped
1/2 cup dry white wine
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 pound linguini
1/4 cup coarsely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley

1. If using leftover salmon, flake into large pieces or cut fresh fillet into 1-inch pieces. Trim Swiss chard stems and cut into 1-inch pieces. Set aside.
2. Heat the oil with the butter in a large skillet and when the butter is melted add the shallots. Sauté shallots a minute or two until translucent and add the chard stems. Toss to coat in the mixture and sauté, stirring occasionally, for 4-5 minutes. Add wine, bring to a boil, adjust heat to a brisk simmer and reduce by half. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

3. Meanwhile, bring a large pot of water to the boil, add about 2 teaspoons coarse salt or to taste and put in the pasta. The pasta should be cooked al dente in about 8-10 minutes, according to the brand you are using.

4. Shortly before the pasta is cooked, add the salmon to the skillet with the vegetable and cook for 1-2 minutes or warm the previously cooked salmon. Ladle 1 cup of the pasta water into the skillet before draining the pasta. Drain pasta in a colander and return to the pot it cooked in. Add the skillet ingredients and toss to mix. Add chopped parsley. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary and serve immediately on warm plates.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

I want to tell you about something very exciting to us here at Long Island Farm Bureau, but first a little background. We have a very active Promotion and Education committee, currently co-chaired by Phil & Debbie Schmitt, which meets and comes up with ideas on how to get the word out to the non-farming community about the importance of Long Island agriculture. In 1985, the committee organized a contest to find a logo to put on locally grown products, and the "Grown on Long Island" logo was born. Dozens of farmers use it on their packaging and trucks and at their farmstands. When you see this logo, you know you are getting the freshest, highest quality product. Another project was the design and printing of our farmstand guide several years ago.

With information on local products, a harvest calendar, a map and a listing of farmstands and u-picks, this free guide is useful to tourists and locals alike. Last year, with the help of a grant from the Northeast Farm Credit Ag Enhancement Program (NFCAP), we produced a humorous television commercial that was aired during the month of September. We got great feedback (it's a real attention-grabber) so keep an eye out for it on cable this spring.

This brings me to my exciting news. Last year, the committee came up with a pretty ambitious project. After discussing the fact that so many children (and a few adults as well!) have no idea where food comes from, we decided to produce a video for kids. We wanted to show them that food doesn't just miraculously appear on grocery store shelves and that farming is one industry that is important to each and every one of us. So, with funding from a grant from New York Farm Bureau Foundation for Agricultural Education, as well as additional support from the NFCAP and the Farm Family Agents of Long Island, we set about creating a fifteen-minute video. The first brainstorming meeting included 4th grade teachers and farmers who came up with the concept of following a product from the seed to the table. Farmers would bring this video into the classroom, show it to the kids, talk about farming and answer questions.

Well, the video is finally done! Entitled "Grown on Long Island," it was professionally produced by a local company, Black Sheep Television, in close cooperation with the committee and staff, and we are very proud of the final product. It is sectioned into three five-minute segments so it can be stopped after each segment for questions. The first segment covers the history of farming on Long Island and why our soil and weather are special; the second shows cultivation, planting, growing, harvesting and packaging; and the third touches on how farming works with other industries. Throughout, it shows the diversity of the commodities grown here. It fits into the fourth grade lesson plan, incorporating social studies, science and vocabulary words but it could be enjoyed by just about anyone. Available free to teachers, it has already been sent out to many from Manhattan to Mattituck. Once they have reviewed the tape, we will be matching each with a grower.

So - if you are a teacher, give Toni a call at 631-727-3777 to get your free copy. It will soon be in every library in Suffolk and Nassau Counties and, if you are not a teacher, it is available for $5 to cover our postage and handling costs. We think (naturally) that every home on Long Island should have one! After all, farming has a direct impact on your life no matter where you live! As the saying goes, "No farms, no food!"

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Here's a system that can give you three successive pickings from a single planting of peas. Elizabeth and I grow our peas in double rows, back-to-back, staked and wire supported two to three feet off the ground.

In addition to producing healthier plants, this method makes feeding, and mulching easier. Picking, once a tedious chore, is now a pleasant operation because you don't have to bend over so much and the pea-filled pods hang where you can see them without peering and hunting.

We plant drought and wilt resistant varieties, using both the dwarf and taller late producers which permit successive crops plus interplanting with corn and tomatoes. Because peas prefer cool weather, they should be started as soon as the ground is workable. We keep our soil well prepared in advance, (in fall) tilling under green manure, shredded leaves and old mulches ahead of the season. We also sprinkle limestone every other year as a blender of soil nutrients.

Peas are a short-time crop, and since we want to keep our organic garden working all the time, we plant them in twin rows eight inches apart, leaving three to four feet between the double rows so corn and tomatoes will be able to take over when they are through. When the peas reach the tendrill stage, 8 to 10 inches tall, it is time to start staking them out.

We collect and save spoiled hay for mulching. When we use hay or straw for mulching. We finish putting down the mulch and add cottonseed and soybean meals at a rate of three pounds per 100 square foot.

After cutting the weeds with a hoe, we sprinkle the area with bone meal, granite dust and compost, working the additives into the soil and taking care not to disturb the root systems.

Between the twin rows, we erect the wire fence, starting at either end and using the wooden stakes to anchor it in place. We weave the stakes through the wire strands, thrusting them one foot into the ground, and spacing them at three foot intervals. If necessary we reinforce the structure by weaving the wire and wood together.

Taking care not to injure the young plants, we slip the laths behind them and lift the vines up off the ground and against the wire. We keep the laths in place by thrusting several sticks behind them into the ground. Later, when the tendrils take hold, we carefully remove the laths and store them for next year.

After working along the second twin row in the same way and securing the vines, we side dress the rows, working in bone meal and compost into the soil. Finally, we mulch the entire area to a depth of three to four - inches, completely covering the soil right up to the plants.

The same method can be used for the late, tall varieties, with forty-inch stock wire and longer, heavier stakes set four to six feet apart, depending on the length and height of the row. The most important part is the careful handling of the tender young pea vines so they are not injured or torn.

Our pea patch is now left alone to bear and produce until picking time. It is good to check the rows, and pick an occasional weed thrusting through the mulch and to secure sagging parts of vine with whip cuttings. When the vines are through bearing, they are pulled up and used on the spot as mulch for subsequent plantings.

Peas are legumes, which work in harmony with a group of bacteria which live symbiotically on their roots. These bacteria do the actual job of taking gaseous nitrogen from the air and fixing or concentrating it in pink root nodules which then slough off, adding nitrogen (N) to the soil in a form plants can take up as nutrients. Properly inoculated legumes can generate up to 300 pounds of useable protein based nitrogen (N) per acre.

Elizabeth and Crow Miller are the proprietors of The Spring Meadow Organic Farming and Gardening Research Center in Southold.

Central Suffolk and Staff Reach Agreement

Officials from Central Suffolk Hospital and members of SEIU 1199 have reached a tentative agreement on a new three year contract, announced Hospital President Joseph F. Turner, Jr. The agreement, which was ratified by 1199 members today, is scheduled to be voted on by Central Suffolk's Board of Directors at their regular March meeting.

"The members of 1199 should be commended for their decision to work with us in settling this contract," said Mr. Turner, noting that this was the hospital's first contract negotiation with SEIU 1199 which merged with Local Board 1115 in January. Local Board 1115 had represented 275 housekeepers, dietary workers, licensed practical nurses, patient care techs and administrative support staff at Central Suffolk since 1987.

If approved by the Hospital Board, the contract would provide wage increases of two and a half percent each year for the next three years. In addition, the proposed agreement allows for classification upgrades and certification pay for certain job categories.

Under terms of the tentative deal, employee members of 1199 would be enrolled in the union pension plan within the first 30 months of contract. The provision would allow employee members to retain previously earned pension under the Hospital plan and gain past service credits under the new union pension plan. The agreement also would provide for a new union health insurance plan that would eliminate co-pay contributions on behalf of union members.

Among other terms, the proposed contract also establishes a Labor/Management Committee to explore issues related to job satisfaction, enhancing employee skills and health and safety. In addition, the tentative deal would enable the union to hold member meetings at the hospital.

The proposed contract would expire on December 31, 2002.

Understanding Diabetes: The Silent Killer

Diabetes affects nearly 16 million people in the United States. It attacks people of every age, sex and racial background and has been called the "epidemic of our time" by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Each day 2,200 Americans are diagnosed with diabetes, which means 800,000 people will be diagnosed this year alone.

The seventh leading cause of death in this country, diabetes is called a "silent killer" because its symptoms often do not appear in its early stages. In fact, one-third of all people with diabetes are not even aware that they have the disease. By the time diagnosis is made for Type II diabetes, complications such as kidney and cardiovascular disease, and eye and nerve damage may already be present in some people.

There are two main types of diabetes. Type I diabetes occurs when the body does not produce insulin, a hormone that is necessary for the body's cells to be able to use blood sugar. People with Type I diabetes, which usually develops during childhood or adolescence, must take daily insulin injections to stay alive.

Approximately ninety percent of people with diabetes have Type II, which usually occurs after age forty-five. Type II diabetes results when the body produces insulin, but its cells are unable to efficiently use it. Type II diabetes may remain undiagnosed for years because the disease develops slowly. People with diabetes have increased blood glucose or blood sugar, which leads to the symptoms of diabetes such as thirst and an increased need to urinate. They may also feel tired. Some people may have an increased appetite, coupled with weight loss. Type II diabetes can often be controlled through an improved diet, nutrition and exercise routine. But sometimes these may not be enough. In some cases, people with Type II diabetes may need oral medications and/or insulin.

"Unfortunately, many people only become aware they have diabetes when they develop one of its life-threatening complications," says Amita Dasmahapatra, MD, Director, Medical Policy and Programs at Merck-Medco, the nation's leading provider of prescription drug care for more than 51 million Americans. "Since diabetes is so common, people need to be aware of the symptoms, particularly if they fall into one of the high-risk groups for the disease."

Regardless of diabetes type, there are ways to help control the disease, including taking appropriate medications, frequently monitoring blood sugar levels, lowering blood pressure, quitting smoking, getting plenty of exercise and following a well-balanced diet. More importantly, regularly visit your physician and diabetes educator.

The cause of diabetes is unknown, but heredity and diet are believed to play a role in its development. Other conditions such as high blood pressure and obesity also affect whether or not diabetes will occur.

Remember diabetes cannot be cured, but it can be controlled. To learn more about diabetes, its risk factors, symptoms and treatments, and how to avoid the complications of uncontrolled diabetes, visit www.merck-medco.com.

POLICE BLOTTER

Perhaps the perpetrator who helped themselves to all the lumber over the last couple of weeks is starting a construction company. Somebody stole a step ladder, an eight-foot ladder and a large box of nails from a construction site on Jericho Close Road in East Hampton.

Another construction site, this time the Hess gas station in Wainscott, was also hit. The criminal craftsman made off with a thirty-two foot ladder, fifteen roof brackets, six planks and an air compressor. Three days later, an eight inch cut off saw was stolen.

More tools were stolen from another construction site in Wainscott. A locked trailer was broken into on Windsor Lane. The tools taken include two circular saws, two chop saws, a table saw, a laser level, two cordless drills and $750 in assorted tools.

As if having tools stolen was not bad enough, a Montauk man placed two nail guns in the bed of his pickup and drove off without closing the tailgate. The guns, valued at $700, fell out and could not be found.

Somebody pried padlocks off of three sheds on Water Mill Towd Road in Water Mill. The burglar, perhaps not seeing anything to his or her liking, did not take anything. The caretaker of the property said that furniture, art and strangely enough, tools, were left untouched.

If you have a hard time finding your way around Springs, it's probably because somebody knocked down the street signs on Norfolk Drive, Tyrone Drive, Orchard Lane, Hog Creek Lane, Homestead Lane and King's Point Road. A town police officer discovered that the signs were not standing at their normal vertical position, but it is unclear how the signs came to rest in their present, horizontal position.

A Montauk man was charged with petit larceny after he allegedly helped himself to two cans of Goya Vienna sausage at the Montauk IGA. Matthew T. Miller was allegedly observed by Mary Tyler, the store's manager, placing the so-called food in his pocket before leaving the store. Tyler followed Miller to the Memory Motel, watched him enter his room, then called the police. East Hampton Police found Miller in his room with said so-called food in his jacket. Stolen "goods" were valued at $1.29 per can.

Another apparently hungry person broke into a home on Ridge Way in Hampton Bays and stole a gallon of milk, a half gallon of juice, a ham steak, a jar of jelly and two dollars.

A Southampton man was found by police standing in the middle of Fords Lane. When asked to move, James Brown allegedly refused and according to police, "displayed threatening behavior." Brown was arrested for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest, he apparently did not feel good.

Continuing the trend of road standing, three Riverhead men were allegedly found standing in the middle of Old Quogue Road in Riverside. Scott G. Baker, Eric Walker and Terrill N. Latney were allegedly blocking traffic and would not move when so directed by police. The three men were charged with disorderly conduct.

years ago in dan's papers

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO
"Best if Eaten Before May 17"
 March 8, 1985

I've been wondering about the writing they put on the side of this box of Wheat Chex cereal I'm looking at. BEST IF USED BEFORE MAY 17 it says. What do they mean by this? If they mean that we ought to eat the stuff before May 17th rolls down the pike, why don't they say that? Something wrong with saying BEST IF EATEN BEFORE MAY 17?

I have considerable difficulty with the phrase BEST IF USED BEFORE MAY 17. Somehow, the phrase conjures up rubbing the Wheat Chex onto something or sprinkling it among the roses in the garden. Definitely, it does not conjure up images of eating anyway. I mean, one does not say I'M REALLY HUNGRY, I THINK I'LL SIT DOWN HERE AND USE SOME WHEAT CHEX.

I checked a number of containers around the house containing things that are either eaten or drunk. Nowhere is there a phrase that uses either the word EAT or DRINK. On the other hand, I did find a milk carton that reads SELL BEFORE MARCH 5. There were quite a few with the notation that they should be sold before this date or before that date.

When you think about it, and I most certainly have thought about it, neither the phrase about using the product or about selling the product is what they really want to say. SELL BEFORE MARCH 5, for example, accomplished absolutely nothing. You could legally have something sold on March 5, then take it home, put it in the refrigerator and if you didn't drink it, watch it turn to some kind of crud by March 15. What good is that?

As for BEST IF USED BY MAY 17, certainly the product is best if used by May 17, but then again, it is even better than best if used on May 16. In fact, if you can get it and use it on May 3 it's just about as fresh and as best as it could be. It makes the BEST BY MAY 17, in fact, look pretty rotten.

Furthermore, there is a whole lot more they are leaving out if all they've got to say is that it is best if used by May 17. For example, by May 19, the stuff is going to turn a sickly yellow. By May 28, there will be green squiggly things growing along the top of it.

What they really want to say here is EAT BY MARCH 5 or DRINK BY MAY 17. So why the hell don't they just come out and say it?

I've got two theories.

THEORY NUMBER ONE. This involves the advertising and public relations department. According to their investigations, the consuming public finds the words EAT or DRINK distasteful when written on the side of a Wheat Chex box or milk carton. We live in a puritan society after all, and though EAT or DRINK is exactly what is supposed to be done with the product, the words themselves are kind of a turn off. They refer to bodily functions, like sweating or belching. I mean, eating and drinking may be just fine but absolutely you will not find them on the sides of anything if you take the trouble to look. The manufacturers of these things to eat and drink, having come to this conclusion, probably lobbied long and hard with the powers that be in Washington to keep these 'delicate words off the sides of their products. USE is wide ranging and pretty harmless. SELL has nice connotations. Very likely they got their way in a close Congressional vote.

THEORY NUMBER TWO, or, the legal theory. Some of these big corporations, you know, have hundreds of attorneys hired full time to just sit around and talk to one another and examine such things as what goes on the sides of cereal boxes. Probably the word EAT was initially suggested for the side of the Wheat Chex box.

"We have to cover ourselves," lawyer number one said. "There's a whole heck of a lot more that one can do with a box of Wheat Chex besides EAT it."

"Like what?"

"You could rub it on something. Suppose somebody discovered that rubbing Wheat Chex on your chest relieved the common cough? Now how would that be, us having the phrase EAT BEFORE MAY 15 on the side of the product? We would have left out an entire category of things one could do with Wheat Chex besides eat them. We'd have incomplete coverage."

"Well then, what about CONSUME BEFORE MAY 15?"

"Suppose the Wheat Chex were NOT consumed. For example, suppose the Wheat Chex were glued to a piece of cardboard and then laminated and hung on the wall as a great work of art. The Wheat Chex would not have been consumed. In fact, the idea would be never to consume them. The longer they remained on the cardboard, as a matter of fact, the more valuable the work of art was liable to become. Works of art are known for becoming more valuable as time goes on."

"That's true."

"Say USE BEFORE MAY 15. As a matter of fact, say BEST IF USED BEFORE MAY 15. There are legal ramifications if the company should make a decree such as USE BEFORE MAY 15. Try the 'BEST' approach where you are just stating the company's opinion. It keeps the company on the fence. Liability is way down."

"I see."

Please pass the sugar.
